

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-08103-0 - A Narrative of Three Years' Residence in France, Principally in the Southern Departments, from the Year 1802 to 1805: Volume 3

Anne Plumptre

Index

More information

INDEX

TO THE THREE VOLUMES.

A.

- ABDERAMEN, caliph of Cordova, anecdote of him, i. 290.
- Academy* of belles-lettres at Marseilles, ii. 41.—Of music, ib. 42.—Of painting and sculpture, ib. 43.—All united in one, ib. ib.
- Actors* and actresses at Paris, warm adherents of the revolution, i. 67.
- Adanson*, the celebrated botanist, a native of Aix, ii. 360.
- Adraman*, a celebrated character, a native of Marseilles, ii. 48.
- Adrien*, Mary, a girl at Lyons, her extraordinary fortitude, i. 333.
- Agen*, an ancient town in Guienne, iii. 82.
- Aiguillon*, the town of, when erected into a duchy, iii. 85.
- Aix*, the town of, in Provence, its foundation and great antiquity, ii. 321.—Roman baths discovered there, ib. 322.—Roman towers and their demolition, ib. 327.—Public library left to the town and now lost, ib. 336.—The town very agreeable as a place of residence, and the expenses of living very moderate, ib. 461.
- Albertas*, marquis de, murdered in his chateau, ii. 258.
- Almonds*, excellent eaten fresh off the tree, ii. 255.—Grown in abundance about Aix, and mode of cracking them, ib. 429.
- Amadeus*, Victor, king of Sardinia, explanation given to him of the initials in his armorial bearings, iii. 379.
- American revolution*, impression made by it at Marseilles, ii. 152.
- Amphitheatre*, the Roman one at Nismes, i. 428.—Some remains of one at Bordeaux, iii. 92.
- Anecdote* of two English travellers at Marseilles, i. viii. preface, note.—One related by Sir John Carr of two prisoners at Toulon, probably erroneous, ib. 358, note.—Of two English travellers going to Vaucluse, ib. 400.—Of Bonaparte while a youth at Marseilles, ii. 66.—Of Bonaparte's return from Egypt, ib. 81.—Of the sentiments of an old man at Marseilles respecting Bonaparte, ib. 82.—Respecting the Genoese carrying away fugitives from Marseilles,

- ib.* 105.—Of a lady at Marseilles who saved her husband's life by menacing the revolutionary judge, ib. 115.—Of a man who saved himself by a similar kind of resolution, ib. ib.—Of a surgeon at Toulon at the time of the requisitions, ib. 128.—Of the noble conduct of a father towards his son in the time of terror at Marseilles, ib. 131.—Of a servant towards his mistress at the same period, ib. 132.—Of a French general and a convent of German monks, ib. 143.—Of a commissary of the police at Marseilles, ib. 145. —Of a commandant of the police, ib. ib.—Two respecting the disinterestedness of the villagers of Sixfours, ib. 228.—Two more illustrating the generosity of the Provençal character, ib. 451.—Of Campistron, secretary to the duke de Vendome, iii. 46, note.—Of a Vendéan at the hospital at Douay, ib. 130.—Of a Corsican officer and Bonaparte, ib. 256.—Of general Dugommier and Bonaparte after the taking of Toulon, ib. 265.—Of a French soldier on the army's arriving off the coast of Egypt, ib. 321.—Of Bonaparte and the discontented officers, ib. 358.—Of Bonaparte and the merchants of Rouen, ib. 359.—Of the opinion of some French ladies respecting Bonaparte, ib. 379. note.—Of Bonaparte and Madame de Stael, ib. 381.—Of a duke of Burgundy's reply to complaints made against some of his officers, ib. 388.
- Anges*, Nôtre Dame des, a mountain near Marseilles, ii. 200.
- Angleterre*, Hôtel d', at Paris, a very bad one, i. 24.
- Anglo-maniacs*, an appellation given to Bonaparte and two of his brothers, while youths, iii. 255.
- Anomalies*, three extraordinary ones exhibited by our interference in the Spanish disputes, iii. 345.
- Apt*, a town in Provence, wonderful story of men poisoned by drinking wine there, ii. 287.
- Aqueduct*, the famous Roman one called the Pont-du-Gard, i. 418.—One at the entrance to Marseilles, where three persons were concealed during the reign of terror, ii. 121.—A very handsome modern one at Montpellier, iii. 16.
- Arabic inscriptions* in the Eglise Major at Marseilles, ii. 10.
- Arbre de Judé*, a very beautiful tree, ii. 433.
- Arc*, a small river near Aix, why so called, ii. 386.
- Armes*, Place de, at Toulon, ii. 273.
- Arms*. Extraordinary feats performed by a man without arms, ii. 252.
- Arrens*, a village near Marseilles, ceremony of interring the carnival there, iii. 183.

- Arthur*, king, and the knights of the round table, claimed by the Brétons as of their country, iii. 187.
- Assalini*, the causes to which he ascribes the epidemic distemper in the Gallo-Egyptian army, iii. 278.—His testimony to Bonaparte's care of his sick, ib. 297.
- Assignats*, abusés occasioned by the depreciation of them, ii. 124.—Hoarded up by a person at Marseilles to the great injury of his family, ib. 127.
- Athenæum* club in London, testimony of an English gentleman there to Bonaparte's care of his sick in Egypt and Syria, iii. 297.
- Aubagne*, a town between Marseilles and Toulon, ii. 254.—Famous for its muscat wine, ib. 255.
- Aubusson*, famous for its tapestries, i. 193.
- Augustine*, St. the canons of, a very luxurious body, iii. 368, note.
- Avignon*, antiquity of the town, i. 384.—Ceded to the pope, ib. 385.—Palace of the popes there destroyed, ib. 387.—Roman remains at Avignon nearly destroyed, ib. 390.—Ruined bridge over the Rhone there, ib. 392.—Tomb of Laura de Sade, ib. 394.—Ridiculous appellation given to Avignon by the French, ib. 396.
- Authors*, their extensive rights over their works in France, i. 79.
- Aygalades*, once a seat of the duke de Villars near Marseilles, ii. 199.

B.

- Badger*, a Lyonnese, his heroism in dying to save his brother, i. 342.
- Bagatelle*, a seat of the count d'Artois in the Bois-de-Boulogne, i. 90.
- Baraillon*, a French officer, the manner in which he was saved from execution at Lyons, i. 356.
- Barbaroux* and others, protection experienced by them from a gentleman in Bretagne, iii. 216.—Ode to electricity by Barbaroux, ib. 218.
- Barbe*, Isle de, an island in the Saone near Lyons, i. 272.
- Barbets* of Piedmont, some account of them, ii. 53.—Numbers arrested and sent to the colonies, ib. 56.
- Barrigues*, the seat of Monsieur de Fontainieux near Marseilles, ii. 199.
- Barthélemi*, Jean Louis, extraordinary poem written by him on the penitence of Mary Magdalen, ii. 317.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-08103-0 - A Narrative of Three Years' Residence in France, Principally in the Southern Departments, from the Year 1802 to 1805: Volume 3

Anne Plumptre

Index

More information

- Barthelemy*, Monsieur, the ex-director, ii. 208.—His seat near Aubagne, ib. 256.
- Bas-bréton*, language, its resemblance to the Welsh, iii. 183.—Not many remains of it as a written language, ib. 188.—A Bas-bréton song, ib. 189.—Bréton proverbs, ib. 195.
- Basques*, a people in the south of France, iii. 31, note.
- Bastides*, the name given to the country-houses about Marseilles, ii. 51. note.—Fondness of the Marseillais for their bastides, ib. 194.—Sunday parties to them, ib. ib.
- Bastille*, adventure on the spot where it stood, i. 105.
- Bâteau, Le*, a song written in the prisons at Lyons, i. 304.
- Batbs*, the Roman ones at Nismes, i. 434.—Those at Aix in Provence, ii. 322.
- Batonniers*, their office in the Fête-Dieu at Aix, ii. 237.
- Batz*, an island off the coast of Finisterre, iii. 159.
- Bayon*, Pierre de, surnamed Libertat, procession in honour of him at Marseilles, ii. 60.
- Bazoche*, the name given to the body of attorneys at Aix, ii. 235.
- Beaucaire*, a town in Languedoc, the bridge of boats there over the Rhone, i. 439.—Fair of Beaucaire, ib. 440.
- Beausset, Le*, a very beautiful little valley, ii. 264.
- Beausset*, Monsieur de, governor of the citadel of Marseilles, his tragical end, ii. 52.
- Beckford*, Mr., mistaken for the duke of Bedford, i. 196.
- Beggars*, their number and importunity in the north of France, i. 19.
- Belle-Cour*, La Place, the finest square in Lyons, i. 247.—Devastation of it, ib. 248.
- Bernardines*, convent of at Marseilles, converted into the Lyceum, ii. 38.
- Berre*, Etang de, a large inlet of the sea in Provence, ii. 394.
- Beziers*, a town in Languedoc, once a Roman colony, iii. 26.—Variety of sports there on Holy Thursday, ib. 28.
- Binasco*, burning of the village of, by Bonaparte's order, animadversions upon it, iii. 272.
- Birds*, a terrible slaughter of them in Provence, ii. 436.
- Biaye*, a port on the Gironde, the reputed burial-place of Orlando Furioso, iii. 105.
- Boiling-water*, charge made for some at an inn on the road to Lyons, i. 226.
- Bois-de-Boulogne*, in the neighbourhood of Paris, i. 89.
- Boisgelin*, Monsieur de, archbishop of Tours, sermon preached by

- him at the restoration of public worship, i. 128.—Canal of Boisgelin in Provence, ii. 440.
- Bonaparte*, Carolo, father to the French emperor, chosen a deputy to represent the nobility of his country, iii. 250.—Would fain have followed general Paoli to England, ib. 252.
- Bonaparte*, Madame Joseph, a Marseillaise, interest taken by her in procuring the erasure of emigrants, ii. 179.
- Bonaparte*, Madame Letitia, mother to the French emperor, a remarkable circumstance attending her pregnancy, iii. 252.—Likened to Latona, ib. 253.—Afterwards called the mother of the Gracchi, ib. 255.—Verses addressed to her in 1767, ib. 408.
- Bonaparte Napoléon*, popularity acquired by him from the restoration of peace and of public worship, i. 14.—The private manner in which he went to the theatre as Consul, ib. 66.—Numbers of prints, busts, &c. of him in the shops and stalls at Paris, ib. 85.—The grand parade the best place for seeing him, ib. 109.—His countenance like an ancient Roman one, ib. ib.—His brother Joseph like him, ib. 110.—Best likeness of him in England Masquerier's picture, ib. ib.—First celebration of his birth-day, ib. 180.—Anecdote of him while a youth at Marseilles, ii. 66.—Illumination at Marseilles on his return from Egypt, ib. 81.—Anecdote respecting his landing without performing quarantine, ib. ib.—Some account of his coronation, iii. 138.—On the alleged lowness of his origin, ib. 246.—His descent on the paternal side, ib. 247.—On the maternal, ib. 249.—His early passion for the military profession, ib. 253.—His enthusiasm in favour of the English constitution, ib. 254.—Appointed to the command of a battalion of Corsican national militia, ib. 256.—Suspected of exciting the French soldiers in Corsica to mutiny, ib. 257.—Reported to be a Scotchman by name Oswald, ib. 259.—Occupied in writing the lives of patriotic Corsicans, ib. 260.—Removes with his family from Corsica, ib. 262.—Instances of his favouring English individuals, ib. ib. note.—Appointed to command the artillery at the siege of Toulon, ib. 263.—Testimony borne by general Dugommier to his services on that occasion, ib. 265.—Appointed to the command of the army of Italy, ib. 267.—Examination into the truth of certain acts of cruelty imputed to him, ib. 270.—Inquiry into the truth of his massacring the Turkish prisoners, ib. 275.—Lenity shown by him to the insurgents at Cairo, ib. 290.—Inquiry into the truth of his poisoning his sick soldiers at Jaffa, ib. 292.—Testimonies borne to his care of the sick and wounded in the Syrian expedition, ib.

- 296.—Another testimony to the same effect, ib. 303.—His elevation to the Imperial dignity how received in France, ib. 331.—Ideas of confiding the executive power to him singly long entertained, ib. 333.—Inquiry into the alleged assassination of Pichegru by his order, ib. 335.—His conduct in quitting Egypt represented here as cowardly and base, ib. 348.—Called by some people a coward and a bungler, ib. 334.—His name used to frighten children, ib. 356.—On the alleged irritability of his temper, ib. 358.—Anecdote of him and the discontented officers, ib. ib.—and of the merchants of Rouen, ib. 360.—General Clarke's attachment to him, ib. ib.—Moderation shown by him to those who have opposed him, ib. 361.—His magnanimous conduct towards the secretary and brother of Moreau, ib. 362.—and towards two ladies who had concealed a conspirator, ib. ib.—and towards the Messieurs Polignac, ib. 363.—and towards a Prussian lady, ib. 364.—His answer when told that he was much caricatured, ib. ib.—His visit to his nurse on his return from Egypt, ib. 365.—Anecdote of him and a soldier in Belgium, ib. ib.—Two lines from Corneille applied to him by the French, ib. 367.—His answer when requested to take a second secretary, ib. ib.—Not beloved by partisans, ib. 368.—Accused of ostentation, ib. 370.—Exception made by some persons to his not being a Frenchman, ib. 371.—Not assailable by female influence, ib. 379.—Anecdote of him and Madame de Stael, ib. 381.—His exertions in the establishment of religious freedom, ib. 384.—The favour shown by him to the Jews, ib. 385.—Whether it be possible to make peace with him; ib. 389.
- Bordeaux*, fine approach to the town, iii. 88.—Its striking and noble situation, ib. 91.—The theatre the handsomest in France, ib. 96.—The museum, ib. 98.—Two Roman tombs recently dug up near the town, ib. 103.
- Borelli*, chateau, one of the principal seats near Marseilles, ii. 200.
- Botanic garden*, one at Lyons, i. 262.—That at Toulon, ii. 276.—That at Montpellier, iii. 18.
- Bouche*, Balthasar, an eminent lawyer at Aix, his disinterestedness, ii. 362.
- Bouche*, Honoré, the historian of Provence, his extraordinary industry in collecting the materials for his history, ii. 361.
- Boudin*, mistranslation of the word in French and English dictionaries, iii. 70, note.
- Boulevards*, at Paris, the animated scene they present, i. 83.—New ones making at Marseilles, ii. 17.

INDEX.

419

- Boulogne*, the town and harbour of, i. 19.
- Bousquié*, a merchant at Lyons, account of him and his dog, i. 328.
- Bouts-rimés*, three pieces of poetry made on the same, i. 306.
- Bravade*, de St. Jean d'Aix, ceremony of it, ii. 347.
- Brétagne*, the face of the country similar to Devonshire, iii. 224.—
The country subject to fogs, ib. 225.—Pastimes common in the country, ib. 226.—Odd ceremonies at the weddings, ib. 227.
- Bréton, Comité*, the origin of the Jacobin club, iii. 111.
- Brétons*, the, remarkable for their superstitions, iii. 165.
- Brigaland*, a gaoler at Lyons, i. 319.
- Bristol*, lord, taken prisoner in Italy, and released by Bonaparte, iii. 263, note.
- Brodum*, Dr. passing at Paris for a Milord, i. 196.
- Brotteaux*, the plain of, the theatre of the fusillades at Lyons, i. 357.
- Broussonnet*, Monsieur, professor of botany at Montpellier, iii. 18.
- Brunière*, a judge of the revolutionary tribunal at Lyons, i. 323.
- Brutus*, the name borne by a revolutionary judge at Marseilles, ii. 91.
- Buonaparte*, Andrea, abbate of Sesto, iii. 249.
- Buonaparte*, Bindo Ferdinando, a literary character in the 18th century, iii. 249.
- Buonaparte*, Jacopo, a supposed writer in the 16th century, iii. 249.
- Buonaparte*, Nicolo, a comedy written by him, iii. 248.—Another of the same name an eminent lawyer, ib. ib.
- Burgundy*, duke of, his reply to complaints preferred against some of his officers, iii: 388.

C.

- Cesar's Tower*, a ruin near Aix so called, ii. 391.
- Cairo*, insurrection at, lenity shown by Bonaparte on the occasion, iii. 290.
- Caius Marius*, the remains of a wall built by him near Aix, ii. 384.
—His victory over the Cimbri and Teutones on the plain of Porrières, ib. 385.—An arch erected upon the plain to commemorate it, ib. 386.
- Calais*, the town old and dirty, i. 13.—Monasteries in ruins there, ib. 15.
- Camargue*, the Delta at the mouths of the Rhone, ii. 395.
- Camel*, procession of the, at Beziers, iii. 28.
- Campistron*, secretary to the duke of Vendome, anecdote of him, iii. 46, note.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-08103-0 - A Narrative of Three Years' Residence in France, Principally in the Southern Departments, from the Year 1802 to 1805: Volume 3

Anne Plumptre

Index

More information

- Camus*, magnanimous conduct of Bonaparte towards him, iii. 361.
- Canals*, numerous ones projected in France, ii. 439.—One making which is to unite the five principal rivers, ib. 441.—Canal of Languedoc, description of it, iii. 73.
- Caper*, the shrub which bears it very beautiful, ii. 262.
- Capet*, Hugues, the origin ascribed to him by Danté, iii. 246.
- Capillaire*, famous at Montpellier, iii. 22.
- Capitouls*, the former title of the chief magistrates at Toulouse, iii. 59.
- Carcassonne*, a town in Languedoc, remarkable siege of the place under Simon de Montfort, iii. 37.
- Cardes*, a vegetable famous about Aix, ii. 434.
- Caricatures*, several published on Bonaparte's elevation to the imperial dignity, iii. 364.
- Carmagnole*, costume worn at Marseilles, ii. 95.
- Carnival*; renewed at Paris in 1802, i. 26.—Carnival at Marseilles, ii. 182.—Its interment at Arrens on Ash-Wednesday, ib. 183.
- Carnot*, dispute between him and Barras, which had occasioned Bonaparte's appointment to the command of the army of Italy, iii. 267.—Generous conduct of Bonaparte towards him, ib. 361.
- Carr*, Sir John, his anecdote of two prisoners at Toulon probably erroneous, i. 358.
- Castelnaudary*, a town in Languedoc, iii. 38.
- Catalans*, a village inhabited by them near Marseilles, ii. 74.
- Cato the Censor*, a medal of him lost in the revolution, i. 260.
- Cave of death*, the vault for the condemned at Lyons so called, i. 340.
- Cave of life*, a part of the prisons at Lyons so called, i. 336.
- Caumont*, marquis de, a singular kind of humourist, i. 411.
- Celtic poetry*, four pieces of. iii. 190.
- Cerceaux*, dances with them, iii. 30.
- Cervantes*, a story whence this satirist probably took one of Sancho's judgements, iii. 215.
- Champion and lover*, their contest, a specimen of Bréton courtship, iii. 228.
- Champs-Elysées*, at Paris, amusements of them, i. 85.
- Champ-de-Mars*, at Paris, i. 53.—That at Bordeaux, iii. 100.—Whence the name is derived, ib. ib. note.
- Chantilly*, the former seat of the prince de Condé, i. 20.—Fête given there to the emperor Joseph, ib. 21.—Two new manufactories there, ib. 22.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-08103-0 - A Narrative of Three Years' Residence in France, Principally in the Southern Departments, from the Year 1802 to 1805: Volume 3

Anne Plumptre

Index

More information

INDEX.

421

- Charbonnières*, a remarkable prison in the Recluses at Lyons, i. 293.
- Charivari*, account of it, ii. 236, note.—Still kept up in Provence, ib. ib.—Also in Bretagne, iii. 232.
- Chartreux*, monastery of, at Lyons, i. 260.—That at Villeneuve in Languedoc, ib. 416.—That near Marseilles, ii. 36.
- Chartrons*, a fine range of buildings at Bordeaux, iii. 99.
- Chateau d'If*, an island in the bay of Marseilles, ii. 68.
- Chateaufort de Gadagne*, a village between Avignon and Vaucluse, fine view from it, i. 398.
- Chaufte-pieds*, much used in Provence, ii. 418.
- Chevaliers du Soleil*, or Sabreurs, at Marseilles, their outrageous conduct, ii. 135.
- Chevre, La*, the point of, on the coast of Brétagne, ruins there called the city of Is, iii. 212.
- Chinard*, the sculptor of Lyons, anecdotes of him, i. 274.—Others, ib. 303.
- Chouans*, origin of the party, iii. 118.—Why so called, ib. 120.
- Christenings*, mode of celebrating them in France, ii. 163.
- Christmas-day*, manner of celebrating it in France, ii. 160.
- Cigales*, extraordinary noise made by these insects, ii. 436.
- Cinqmars* and De Thou executed at Lyons, i. 252.
- Citoyen* and Citoyenne become cant terms, i. 185.
- Civic-weddings*, celebrated at Paris on Bonaparte's birth-day, i. 182 :—and at Marseilles after general Leclerc's funeral, ii. 170.
- Clair, St.* quay of, at Lyons, demolition of the houses there, i. 248.
- Clarke*, general, his attachment to Bonaparte, iii. 360.
- Clergy*, attachment of the French to their parochial clergy, i. 130.—Eagerness of the people during the revolution to retain their priests among them, ib. ib.—Not confined to the lower classes, ib. 133.—Held in great veneration in Brétagne, iii. 175.
- Climate and productions* of Lyons and the Lyonnais, i. 276 :—and of Provence, ii. 415 :—and of Languedoc, iii. 68.
- Clock*, the celebrated one in the cathedral at Lyons, i. 263.
- Cloud, St.* description of the place, i. 207.
- Coalitions*, the ill success of those excited against Bonaparte, iii. 339.
- Coche d'eau*, the passage-boat from Lyons to Avignon, i. 364.
- Collot d'Herbois*, the origin of his violent hatred to Lyons, i. 235.
- Column*, one to Bonaparte at Marseilles, ii. 78 :—and to the persons who distinguished themselves in the time of the plague, ib. 83 :—and to commerce, ib. 84 :—and to Homer, ib. ib.
- Commerce*, once suspended not easily recovered, ii. 150.

- Concorde, Place de la*, at Paris, i. 40.—Marble groups at the entrances to it, ib. 41.
- Confectioner*, at Marseilles, the unfortunate manner in which one lost his life during the revolution, ii. 119.—Lawsuits between one and a poet, ib. 162.
- Confiture raisinée*, a sweetmeat made in Provence with the juice of grapes, ii. 425.
- Confluence* of the Saone and Rhone, near Lyons, i. 266.
- Conscription*, the accounts of the discontents which it occasions in France much exaggerated, iii. 318.
- Conservative senate*, palace of, at Paris, i. 50.
- Consigne*, at the entrance of the port at Marseilles, ii. 58.
- Conular guard*, a very fine body, i. 112.
- Cooks*, the French cooks not dirty in their cookery, i. 201.
- Corchand*, one of the revolutionary judges at Lyons, i. 322.
- Cornouailles*, the western end of Brétagne, so called by the natives, ii. 185.
- Corsica*, prophecy of Rousseau concerning it, iii. 398.
- Corsicans*, opinion given of them by two English poets, iii. 399.
- Cosne*, a town in the Nivernais, a great place for cutlery, i. 222.
- Couchoux*, a young Lyonnese, his filial duty and affection, i. 354.
- Couplet*, an ingenious one made by an English wit on the Spanish affairs, iii. 345.—One from Corneille frequently applied by the French to Bonaparte, ib. 367.
- Course*, at Marseilles, ii. 14.—That at Aix a very fine one, ib. 326.
- Courtship*, singular manner of carrying it on in Brétagne, iii. 227.
- Cows*, very rare about Marseilles, ii. 196.
- Crau*, a large stony plain in Provence, the Campus Lapidus of the Romans, ii. 394.
- Croix de Ma'the*, an excellent inn at Toulon, and English inscriptions on the wall there, ii. 289.
- Cruelties*, those practised in the revolution ascribable to the effect of the barbarous executions formerly practised in France, i. 29.
- Cuges*, town and valley of, in Provence, ii. 262.
- Customs*, some peculiar to France noticed, i. 173.
- Cutlery*, manufactory of, at Cosne, i. 222:—and at Moulins, ib. 224.

D.

- Daiamonte*, a Spaniard, his fortitude and composure when on the point of being executed, i. 345.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-08103-0 - A Narrative of Three Years' Residence in France, Principally in the Southern Departments, from the Year 1802 to 1805: Volume 3

Anne Plumptre

Index

More information

INDEX.

423

- Danté*, the poet, the origin ascribed by him to the family of Capet, iii. 246.
- David*, change made by him in the costume of the country, i. 68.
- Decizé*, a prisoner at Lyons, his interesting child, i. 309.
- Delacroix*, Monsieur, the prefect of Marseilles, and his embellishments of the town, ii. 78.—His evening parties, ib. 185.—His removal to the prefecture of the Gironde, ib. 214.—Not unpopular at Bordeaux, iii. 102.
- Delandine*, Monsieur, his arrest after the taking of Lyons, i. 289.
- Dé Tibou* and Cinqmars executed at Lyons, i. 252.
- Deuil*, the bridge made by him at St. Cloud, i. 210.—The impression of his claw in the abbey of St. Victor at Marseilles, ii. 32.
- Deutéria*, a Gothic princess, her extraordinary revenge on her daughter, iii. 27.
- Diana*, temple of, at Nismes, i. 432 :—and at Marseilles, ii. 7.
- Diligences* in France cannot overturn, iii. 138.—Excellent regulation of them, ib. 144.
- Discontented officers*, their remonstrance to Bonaparte, iii. 358.
- Distinction*, a love of it natural to mankind, i. 115.
- Doigt*, St. Jean de, a famous Bréton saint, legend concerning him, iii. 172.
- Dons*, a rock in the town of Avignon, i. 388.
- Dorade*, la, a church at Toulouse, supposed to have been a temple of Minerva, iii. 43.
- Douarnenez*, bay of, on the coast of Brétagne, popular story of its formation, iii. 209.
- Dover*, the cliffs of, i. 5.—French vessel wrecked in coming into the harbour, ib. 6.—Competition of the captains of vessels for passengers, ib. 7.—Pretensions of the people to speaking French, ib. 8.—Intercourse between this town and Calais in time of peace, ib. 13.—Satisfaction excited by the renewal of peace, ib. 14.
- Doxa*, Albert, a remarkable prisoner in the Recluses at Lyons, i. 315.
- Dramatic authors*, their rights, i. 79.
- Druidical fiction*, a supposed one, iii. 199.
- Duchesnoir*, Mademoiselle, her débüt at the French theatre, i. 64.
- Dugommier*, general, his reply to a remark on the smallness of Bonaparte's person, iii. 265.
- Durance*, the river, its excentric course, and schemes for improving it, ii. 438.
- Duret*, Praire, a Lyonnese, account of his arrest, i. 326.

E.

- Earthquake*, a slight shock of one felt at Marseilles in 1803, ii. 206.
- Ecole militaire*, at Paris, the place where Bonaparte was educated, i. 52.
- Eglise Major*, at Marseilles, formerly the cathedral, ii. 8.—Arabic inscriptions in it, ib. 10.
- Egyptians*, at Marseilles, constant attendants at religious ceremonies, ii. 171.
- Electricité*, ode par Charles Barbaroux, iii. 218.—Translation of it, ib. 221.
- Elleviou*, principal singer at the Opera-comique at Paris, anecdote of him and two other performers, i. 71.
- Emigrants*, returned to France, remarks upon them, i. 163.—Odd accounts of England given by them, ib. 164.—Danger of placing confidence in the reports of emigrants, iii. 315.
- Engagement* between an English frigate and a French cutter off Marseilles, ii. 73.
- Enghien*, duke de, on his arrest and execution by Bonaparte, iii. 372.
- English ladies*, four sisters settled at Marseilles, ii. 175.
- English soldier*, means taken by one to disable himself from service, iii. 321.
- English tourists* to France in 1802, some remarks on their accounts of the country, i. 152.
- Entracastaux*, Monsieur, his murder of his wife at Aix, and how detected, ii. 323.
- Épée*, abbé de l', and his dumb élève of Toulouse, their story, iii. 61.
- Escape*, extraordinary one, of fifteen prisoners at Lyons on the eve of their execution, i. 346.—Two others of men on their way to the guillotine, ib. 355.—Unsuccessful attempt of one, ib. 357.—Remarkable one of a condemned prisoner at Marseilles, ii. 92.—Another extraordinary one, ib. 121.—Remarkable one of Laroche Jaquelin, a Vendéan leader, in the war of La Vendée, iii. 124.
- Esprit, St.*, bridge of, over the Rhone, tradition attached to it, i. 422.
- Esther*, tragedy of, acted by a party of young ladies at Aix, iii. 6.
- Etang*, the word how applied in France, iii. 69.
- Eucharist, St.*, violence used to make him accept an archbishopric, i. 265.

- Evening parties*, pleasant ones at Marseilles, ii. 184.
Evenos, a village in Provence remarkably situated, ii. 267.
Euthymenes, a celebrated navigator of Marseilles in ancient times, ii. 39.
Exbange, the, at Bordeaux, a very fine building, iii. 96.
Excutioner, at Marseilles, his refusal to act under the revolutionary tribunal, ii. 92.
Expenses of living at London and Paris compared, i. 199.
Explanation given to Victor Amadeus, king of Sardinia, of the initials in his armorial bearings, iii. 379.
Exposition at the Louvre at Paris, i. 189.

F.

- Fairs*, a great number at Aix, ii. 352:—and at Morlaix, iii. 154.
Fanchon la Vieilleuse, her story, i. 73.
Farandoule, a Provençal dance so called, i. 396.
Fardt, battery of the, near Marseilles, ii. 68.
Fauche-Borel, a Swiss, his notices respecting the generals Pichegru and Moreau, iii. 336.
F——, Monsieur de, an emigrant returned through the interest of Madame Joseph Bonaparte, ii. 179.
Female influence, its pernicious effects in state affairs, iii. 379.
Fernex, a judge of the revolutionary tribunal at Lyons, i. 323.
Festival of the fourteenth of July at Paris, i. 179.—That of the fifteenth of August, ib. ib.
Fête kept instead of the birth-day in France, ii. 249.
Fête-Dieu, or festival of Corpus-Christi at Paris, i. 183.—That at Aix, and the ceremonies instituted for it by king René, ii. 220.—The manner of celebrating the same festival at Marseilles, ib. 242.
Figaro, a little dog, his extraordinary attachment to his master, i. 328.
Figs, those of Marseilles particularly celebrated, ii. 437.
Flagellants, at Marseilles, a party so called during the revolution, ii. 96.
Flies, very troublesome in the south of France, ii. 436.
Flocks of sheep and goats, their journeys from the plains to the mountains, ii. 397.
Floquet, the canal of, in Provence, ii. 419.
Floral games, at Toulouse, inquiry into their origin, iii. 47.—Manner of celebrating them in modern times, ib. 56.

- Fluminio*, a little islet on the coast of Brétagne, story attached to it, iii. 206.
- F——*, Madame, a daughter of Sir E—— N——, of Ireland, settled at Marseilles, ii. 174.
- Fontainebleau*, town and forest of, i. 221.
- Fouvielle*, marquis de, afterwards called Rovère, his character, ii. 210.
- Forez, le*, lands there alternately ponds and corn-fields, i. 228.—
Fine morning walk over a part of this country, ib. 229.
- Fork*, a large silver one swallowed by a man at Marseilles, ii. 189.
- Fosæ Marianae*, a canal made by Caius Marius, plan for restoring it, ii. 440.
- Fourvières*, heights of, at Lyons, i. 265.
- Foux, la*, a fountain in Provence similar to Vaucluse, i. 406.
- Fox*, the honourable Charles, his reception at the French theatre, i. 64.
- France*, situation of the country at the peace of Amiens, i. 143.
- Francaur*, a lunatic at Marseilles, account of him, ii. 70.
- Franks*, the ex-French nobles all descended from them, i. 187.
- Frascati*, at Paris, amusements there, i. 80.
- Fratres-Saccati*, a religious order in the south of France, ii. 249.
- Freedom of speech*, in France, inquiry into the present state of it, iii. 324.
- French*, a more national spirit among them than among the English, iii. 322.—Not prepared at the revolution for a very extended system of liberty, ib. 383.
- French ladies*, opinion of some respecting Bonaparte, iii. 379, note.—
Opinion of one respecting queen Mary the Second, ib. 397, note.
- French soldier*, remark of one on first seeing the coast of Egypt, iii. 321.
- Frogs*, those about L'Isle particularly large, i. 400.—Noise made by these animals, ii. 436.
- Frontignan* or Frontignac wine, excellent made at Lunel in Languedoc, iii. 13.
- Fruit*, the great abundance of it in the south of France, ii. 432.
- Funeral obsequies*, those performed for general Leclerc at Marseilles, ii. 166.
- Funeral honours*, celebrated for the Lyonnese who fell in the revolution, i. 360.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-08103-0 - A Narrative of Three Years' Residence in France, Principally in the Southern Departments, from the Year 1802 to 1805: Volume 3

Anne Plumptre

Index

More information

INDEX.

427

Fusillades, the manner in which they were conducted at Lyons,
i. 357.

G.

Gabriel, a Lyonnese, his fate after having escaped from prison,
i. 351.

Galifet, Mademoiselle de, marriage of affection contracted by her,
ii. 387.

Galissè, La, a country-house near Aix, ii. 391.

Galleys, the, at Marseilles, ii. 61.—On the punishment of the galleys, ib. 63.—Mock-fight with them for the amusement of Francis the First, ib. 66.

Gallien, Le Palais, a Roman ruin at Bordeaux, iii. 92.

Games, on the water, given by the prefect of Marseilles, ii. 251.

Gam'ng, whether it produces the most mischief in France or in England, i. 202.

Ganges, in Languedoc, a great manufactory there of silk stockings,
i. 437.

Garagai, a great cavity in the mountain of Sainte Victoire, ii. 406.
—Foolish attempt of a young man to explore it, ib. 407.

Garde-meuble, at Paris, a very fine building, i. 40.

Gardeners and garden seeds, a quantity sent to Egypt by Bonaparte,
iii. 350.

Garlaban, a mountain in Provence, supposed to contain veins of gold, ii. 55.

Garnerin, Madame, her ascent in a balloon, i. 82.

Garonne, comparison between the banks of this river and those of the Rhône, iii. 88.—Voyage down the Garonne from Bordeaux to Blaye, ib. 104.

Gas-lights, original invention of them under the name of thermo-lamps, i. 100.

Gaude, La, a country house near Aix, a curious reservoir there,
ii. 390.

Gay Science, the name given to poetry at Toulouse in ancient times,
iii. 51.—Degrees in it taken, and the qualifications for them,
ib. 53.

Gemenos, a beautiful valley in Provence, ii. 256.—Chateau of Monsieur d'Albertas there, ib. 258.

Geneviève, Sainte, church of, at Paris, now the Pantheon, i. 45.

Genoise, Marseilles by its trade with them preserved from famine
during the revolution, ii. 100.—Anecdote respecting their mer-

- chandize, ib. 101.—Fugitives carried away by them, and anecdote respecting one, ib. 105.—Melancholy fate of Monsieur L——, who attempted to escape in a Genoese vessel, ib. 118.
- Gens de sac et de corde*, a term for worthless people in France, and whence derived, ii. 249.
- Geoffroi*, Monsieur, the Aristarch of the theatres at Paris, i. 92.
- Georges*, Mademoiselle, a new actress at Paris, i. 65.
- Germain, St.*, Fauxbourg de, one of the best parts of Paris, i. 51.
- Gilelin*, Monsieur, a physician at Aix, ii. 362.
- Gnats*, very troublesome at Marseilles, ii. 436.
- Gobelins*, tapestry of, i. 191.
- Gold of Toulouse*, a proverbial expression, the origin of it, iii. 41.
- Good Friday*, ceremony of visiting churches on the eve' of it, ii. 171.
- Gralou*, the name of a king in ancient times in a part of Bretagne, iii. 209.—Odd ceremony with a statue of him at Quimper, ib. 213.
- G——*, Monsieur, of Toulon, his great reverse of fortune, ii. 290.
- Grapes*, the various uses to which they are put in Provence, ii. 422.
- Gregoire*, Monsieur, his velvet pictures, i. 198.
- Grénier d'Abondance*, at Aix, establishment of the, ii. 339.
- Grignan*, the seat of the counts de Grignan, and the burial-place of Madame de Sevigné, i. 370.
- Grivet*, a Lyonnese, extraordinary manner in which he escaped being executed, i. 344.
- Guet*, a part of the ceremonies of the Fête-Dieu at Aix, ii. 231.
- Guillotiere*, Pont de la, at Lyons, i. 269.
- Guillotin*, inventor of the guillotine, two stories concerning him, i. 41.
- Guillotine*, debates whether it is a lenient mode of execution, i. 42.—At first in the Place Belle-Cour at Lyons, but removed to the Place des Terreaux, ib. 251.—Mode of execution by it altered since the revolution, ib. ib. note.

H.

- Halle au Blé*, at Paris, the building and institution, i. 55.
- Hameau de Cbantilly*, a place of amusement at Paris, i. 81.
- Harvest*, manner of gathering it in in Provence, ii. 427.

INDEX.

429

- H——, Monsieur, at the point of Raz, in Bretagne, his protection of the persecuted in the time of terror, iii. 216.
- Hières, the town of, in Provence, its beautiful situation, ii. 280.—The orange groves there, ib. 281.—The birth-place of Massillon, ib. 284.
- Holy-Thursday, festivities celebrated on that day at Beziers, iii. 28.
- Horses of St. Mark, the celebrated ones of Venice, now at Paris, i. 38.
- Hôtels, distinction made in France between them and houses, i. 51.
- Hôtel-de-Ville, that at Lyons formerly a very fine one, but dilapidated by the revolution, i. 253.—A handsome one at Marseilles, ii. 59.—Two fine pictures of the plague in it, ib. 60.—That at Aix, and a remarkable picture in it, ib. 334.—That at Toulouse a very large building, iii. 44.—A new one half finished at Nantes, ib. 132.
- Hospitals, those now existing at Marseilles, ii. 86. — One established some years ago for paralytics, ib. 87.—Hospitals at Aix, ib. 350.
- Hypolite, a noted criminal at Aix, his trial, ii. 380.

I.

- Illuminations, difference between them at London and at Paris, i. 180.—A grand one at Marseilles on Bonaparte's return from Egypt, ii. 81.
- Imperial dignity, how Bonaparte's elevation to it was received in France, iii. 330.—Sentiments expressed on the occasion by a gentleman at Aix, ib. 332.
- Indian fig, a very large plant of it in the botanic garden at Toulon, ii. 227.
- Infernal legion, ravages made by it in La Vendée, iii. 117.
- Inscriptions, many ancient ones destroyed at Lyons, i. 255.—Inscription over a hospital at Nismes, ib. 437.—Arabic ones in the cathedral at Marseilles, ii. 10.
- Invalides, hôtel des, at Paris, i. 43.
- Inundations, the territory of Marseilles much subject to them, ii. 201.—Particulars of several that have occurred, ib. 202.
- Is, a city of that name reputed to have existed in ancient times on the coast of Bretagne, iii. 209.
- Isaure, Clemence, the reputed founder of the Floral games at Toulouse, iii. 47.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-08103-0 - A Narrative of Three Years' Residence in France, Principally in the Southern Departments, from the Year 1802 to 1805: Volume 3

Anne Plumptre

Index

More information

430

INDEX.

Isère, the, a river in Dauphiné, the odd manner of ferrying over it, i. 369.

J.

Jardin des Plantes, or botanic garden, at Paris, i. 103.

Jeunesse, abbé de la, a part of the procession of the Fête-Dieu at Aix, ii. 234.—Origin of this office not known, ib. 236, note.—Afterwards explained, ib. last page, note.

Jews, the favour shown them by Bonaparte, iii. 385.

Jean, queen of Naples and Sicily, her cession of Avignon to the pope, i. 385.

John, St., cathedral of, at Lyons, i. 262.

John, St., fort of, at Marseilles, ii. 57.

John, St., church of, at Aix, ii. 346.

John of Calais, a story resembling it attached to the little island of Fluminio off the coast of Bretagne, iii. 206.

Jouques, Monsieur de, a Provençal nobleman, the manner in which his property was preserved for him by a servant during his emigration, ii. 356.

K.

Kemble, reckoned like Bonaparte, i. 110.—Really like Talma, ib. ib.

Kendal, Mr., his opinion respecting Bonaparte's massacring his Turkish prisoners, and poisoning his sick, iii. 275.

L.

Labouring class, in France, delusions practised upon them in the revolution, iii. 326, and note.

Lafaye, one of the revolutionary judges at Lyons, i. 322.

Lambesc, a town in Provence, horrible inn there, i. 446.

Langon, ferry of, over the Garonne, its great inconvenience, iii. 87.—The wine of Langon very good, ib. 88.

Languages, dislike of the French to the study of them, i. 97.—Somewhat corrected by the revolution, ib. 98.

Languedoc, origin of this name, iii. 66.—Productions of this province, ib. 71.—The celebrated canal of Languedoc, ib. 78.

Laroche Jacquelin, a Vendéan leader, extraordinary escape of him and another officer, iii. 124.

INDEX.

431

- Lara de Sade*, the beloved of Petrarch, her tomb at Avignon, i. 394.—Her picture at Vaucluse, ib. 409.
- Laurenson*, a Lyonnese, his reprieve at the moment of execution, and the impression made upon him by the scene, i. 338.
- Lavoirs*, a sort of stone trenches used for washing in the south of France, ii. 85.
- Lawsuits*, two between a poet and a confectioner at Marseilles, ii. 162.
- Law-tribunals*, at Aix, how constituted, ii. 368.
- Lazare, St.*, the fair of, at Marseilles, ii. 252.—Extraordinary performances there of a man without arms, ib. ib.
- Lechlecb of Plougaznou*, an extraordinary character in Brétagne, iii. 196.
- Legislative body*, their place of assembly at Paris, i. 150.
- Leir, King*, claimed by the Brétons as having been of their country, iii. 186.
- Léon, St. Pol de*, the town of, in Brétagne, iii. 168.—St. Pol a famous saint, and the legend concerning him, ib. ib.
- Libertat*, the procession of his statue at Marseilles, ii. 60.
- Liberty*, demolition of her statue at Aix, ii. 381.
- Liberty*, principles of it germinating in France long before the revolution, ii. 155.—Yet the people were not prepared for a very extended system of it, iii. 383.—Now in a train to understand better the true nature of rational liberty, ib. ib.
- Libraries* and pictures burnt at Lyons, i. 254.—Several valuable ones destroyed at Lyons, ii. 254.
- Literature* and science, state of them during the revolution, i. 95.
- Loire*, heroic action of two men in rescuing seven persons from the waters, i. 223.
- Longchamp*, near Paris, procession to it in Passion-week, i. 88.
- Lottery*, description of the plan of it in France, i. 203.
- Loup, St.*, whimsical name given to a mountain near Montpellier, iii. 16.
- Louvre*, palace of the, at Paris, i. 37.
- Lullaby-song*, one sung to Bonaparte when an infant by his nurse, iii. 41.
- Lunel*, a small town between Nismes and Montpellier, iii. 12.
- Lyceum*, at Marseilles, formerly the convent of the Bernardines, ii. 38.—Academies of Marseilles all united in the Lyceum, ib. 43.—Other branches of this establishment, ib. 44.
- Lyons*, great antiquity of the city, and when founded, i. 232.—Demolished by fire in the reign of Claudius Cæsar, ib. 233.—Sufferings in several other ways experienced by the city, ib. ib.—Dreadful siege by the revolutionary army, ib. 234.—Decree of the Convention for its demolition, ib. 246.—Trade of Lyons declining before the revolution, ib. 256.—Favoured by Bonaparte, ib. ib.

M.

Madelaine, La, the church of, at Paris, the burial-place of Louis the Sixteenth and his queen, i. 40.

Mad horse, procession of the, at Lyons, i. 270.

Malgue, Fort de la, the principal fort on the bay of Toulon, ii. 279.—The wine of La Malgue much esteemed, ib. 280.

Malvoisie d' Aubagne, a famous wine made from the muscat grapes, ii. 255.

Magdalen, Mary, the gospel preached by her at Marseilles, ii. 24.—Her penitence at the Sainte Beaume, ib. 314.—Supposed discovery of her remains, ib. 319.—Dispute between two literati on the truth of the Provençal legends concerning her, ib. ib.

Magdeleneide, the, an extraordinary poem written on the penitence of Mary Magdalen at the Sainte Beaume, ii. 317.

Magne, La Tour, a very old tower at Nismes, i. 436.

Maintenon, Madame de, intrigue carried on to draw the king into owning his marriage with her, ii. 363.

Maison Carrée, a beautiful Roman temple at Nismes, i. 431.

Marengo, the victory of, ascribed by some persons to general Desaix, iii. 334.

Marie Antoinette, her fate and that of Mary queen of Scots compared, i. 90.—Picture of her and her children at Versailles, ib. 214.

Marino, president of the temporary commission at Lyons, i. 320.

Markets, the principal ones at Paris, i. 56.—Fruit-market at Marseilles most profusely supplied, ii. 432.

Marseilha Vieire, a mountain near Marseilles, ii. 201.

Marseillais, the troop so called which committed such excesses in the revolution not really Marseillais, ii. 52.—Some of them afterwards joined the Chouans, iii. 112.—Character of the Marseillais distinct from that of the other Provençaux, ii. 445.—Resembling in many respects the English character, ib. 447.

Marseilles, fine view of the territory from the mountain of La-Viste, ii. 1.—The entrance to the town from Aix very striking, ib. 4.—

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-08103-0 - A Narrative of Three Years' Residence in France, Principally in the Southern Departments, from the Year 1802 to 1805: Volume 3

Anne Plumptre

Index

More information

INDEX.

433

- The port, ib. ib.—Founded by the Phocæans, ib. 6.—Divided into the old and new town, ib. 13.—Destruction of the ancient buildings, ib. 16.—Inconveniences attending the shutting up the town at night while it was inclosed with walls, ib. 18.—Great changes made by the revolution, ib. 89.—Rive-Neuve the last part built, ib. 147.—Several articles of commerce, ib. 148.
- Martba, St.*, her reputed arrival in Provence, and victory over a terrible dragon, i. 441.—Her tomb in the great church at Tarascon, ib. ib.—Procession of the Tarasque at her festival, ib. 442.
- Martigues*, the town of, called the Venice of Provence, ii. 393.
- Martin*, Monsieur, the botanical professor at Toulon, ii. 274.
- Maseres de la Tude*, said to have been one of the foremost in the commotions of the 10th of August, i. 82.
- Masquérier*, his picture of Bonaparte the best likeness of him, i. 110.
- Massillon*, bishop of Clermont, a native of Hières, ii. 284.
- Maximian*, the emperor, a persecutor of the Christians, ii. 26.—His tomb discovered at Marseilles, and his body thrown into the sea, ib. 27.
- Maximum*, the, its consequences at Marseilles, ii. 97.—Song made upon the scarcity occasioned by it, ib. 103.—A Parisian's account of the hardships he had experienced from it, iii. 326, note.
- Mediterranean*, impressions made upon the mind by the first sight of it, ii. 2.—Tranquillity of this sea, ib. 68.—Several sorts of fish caught there, ib. 76.—Swarms of dolphins, ib. 77.
- Medals*, a very fine cabinet of, at Lyons, destroyed in the revolution, i. 260.
- Medoc*, Pays de, a district of Gascony, which furnishes the best claret, iii. 101.—Also celebrated for oysters, ib. ib.—and for flints which polish almost like diamonds, ib. ib.
- Mengaud*, commissary of the police at Paris, his reputed dislike to the return of emigrants, i. 11.
- Merlin*, the enchanter, claimed by the Brétons as of their country, iii. 187.
- Merveilles de Jour*, a jeu-d'esprit, written at Marseilles, ii. 191.
- Michel, François*, a blacksmith of Salon, curious fraud practised upon him, ii. 363.
- Midas*, a story similar to the mythological fable of him, related of a king in Brétagne, iii. 215.
- Mignard, Le*, a country-house near Aix, ii. 390.

VOL. III.

2 F

- Milan*, a fine piece of sculpture representing the plague there, in the Consigne at Marseilles, ii. 58.
- Milord*, a dog called by that name, his services in the revolution, ii. 117.
- Mistral*, or north wind, sometimes very keen in Provence, ii. 416.
- Modes of expression*, among the French, not to be judged by our language, but by their own, i. 171.
- Magniat*, an island at the confluence of the Saone and Rhone, i. 266.
- Moissac*, a very ancient town in the province of Guienne, iii. 77.
- Monarchy*, the abolition of it not wished by the French in general, i. 114.
- Montauban*, a town in the Quercy, iii. 76.
- Montelimart*, a town in Provence, i. 370.
- Mont Joli*, a country-seat near Aix, belonging to Madame F—— of Marseilles, ii. 389.
- Montpellier*, fine effect of a rainbow seen there, iii. 15.—Beautiful situation of the town, ib. ib.—Place de Perou, the principal public walk of the town, ib. ib.—The botanic garden, ib. 18.—Abundance of aromatic plants in its neighbourhood, ib. 22.—Objects of trade, ib. 23.
- Monts d'Or*, hills near Lyons, the cheeses and sausages made there, i. 278.
- Monument*, a remarkable one just without the town of Aix, ii. 351.
- Moore*, Dr., his opinion of the Tarpeian rock, i. 5.
- Morand*, Pont, a bridge over the Rhone at Lyons, i. 263.
- Morlaix*, hospitality of a gentleman in the neighbourhood, iii. 142.—Antiquity of the town, ib. 149.—Siege of it by the army of Henry the Fourth, ib. 150.—Picturesque situation of the town, ib. 151.—The bay, ib. 156.
- Moulins*, a place of manufactory for cutlery, i. 224.—Excellent inn there, ib. 225.
- Muscat grapes*, abundance of them about Aubagne, ii. 255:—and about Roquevaire, ib. 296:—and about Lunel, iii. 13.
- Museum*, that of the Louvre at Paris, i. 25:—that of French monuments, ib. 30.—Museum at Toulouse, iii. 58.—Museum at Bordeaux, ib. 98.—The severe animadversions made in this country upon the manner in which the objects of the museum at the Louvre have been obtained, ib. 351.

N.

- Nans*, a village in Provence near the Sainte Beaulme, ii. 297.—

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-08103-0 - A Narrative of Three Years' Residence in France, Principally in the Southern Departments, from the Year 1802 to 1805: Volume 3

Anne Plumptre

Index

More information

INDEX

435

- Curious cabals among the people respecting the letting out their asses, ib. 299.—Adventurous spirit of a lad there, ib. 301.
- Nantes*, a very dull, gloomy-looking place, iii. 131.—Its hard fate in the revolution, ib. 133.—Odd story on record there concerning a maréchal de Retz, ib. ib.
- Napoléon*, a town projected in La Vendée, to be called after that name, iii. 126.—The name peculiar to Florence, ib. 283.
- Narbonne*, no remains existing of its ancient grandeur, iii. 34.—The church a fine Gothic edifice, ib. 36.—Narbonne honey not to be procured there, ib. ib.
- National Library* at Paris, i. 32.
- National Militia*, establishment of one in Corsica, iii. 256.
- Newers*, a place of manufacture for things in enamel, i. 223.
- New-year's day*, manner of celebrating it in France, ii. 161.
- Nicholas, St.*, the fort of, at Marseilles, commonly called the citadel, ii. 51.—Built by Louis the Fourteenth, ib. 52.—Its demolition in the revolution, ib. ib.
- Nismes*, antiquity of the town, i. 426.—Roman amphitheatre there, ib. 428.—Maison Carrée, ib. 431.—Temple of Diana, ib. 432.—The Roman baths, ib. 434.—La Tour Magne, ib. 436.—Inscription over a hospital, ib. 437.—Second visit to this place, iii. 8.—Extraordinary instance of want of curiosity in a gentleman of Montpellier, ib. 9.
- Nobles of Provence*, their high aristocracy, ii. 355.—Charitable example set by one, ib. 359.—Fortunate in recovering their property, ib. 357.
- Nocturnal visits* to the prisons at Lyons described, i. 313.
- Northcote, Mr.*, his picture of Bonaparte a very good likeness, i. 111.
- Nostradamus*, visit made to him by Charles the Ninth, and his prophecy concerning Henry the Fourth, ii. 281, note.
- Nostrums* for diseases common in Brétagne, iii. 225.
- Noître-Dame*, church of, at Paris, strongly resembling Westminster abbey, i. 43.—Procession thither on Easter Sunday for the restoration of public worship, ib. 122.
- Noître Dame de la Garde*, a fortress just without the town of Marseilles, ii. 19.—The view from it a fine subject for a panorama, ib. 21.
- Nurse*, Bonaparte's, his visit to her, and hers to him, iii. 365.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-08103-0 - A Narrative of Three Years' Residence in France, Principally in the Southern Departments, from the Year 1802 to 1805: Volume 3

Anne Plumptre

Index

More information

436

INDEX.

O.

- Obelisk*, a fine one lying at Alexandria, noticed by Sir Robert Wilson, iii. 353.
- Observateurs de l'homme*, a sect of philosophers in the revolution, ii. 140.
- Observatory*, the, at Marseilles, ii. 58.
- Occitania*, an old name for the province of Languedoc, iii. 67.
- Odéon*, or grand national theatre, at Paris, i. 51.—A place of amusement so called at Aix, ii. 353.
- Oil*, the best to be had about Aix, ii. 428.
- Olive-tree*, description of it, ii. 428.
- Opera*, the grand, at Paris, i. 57.—Opéra comique, its origin, ib. 69.—Principal performers at it, and anecdote of them, ib. 71.
- Orange*, a town in Provence, built by the ancient Marseillais, i. 371.—The triumphal arch called Caius Marius's, ib. 372.—The revolutionary tribunal established there, ib. 373.
- Oratoire*, college of, at Lyons, i. 257.—Public library, ib. 260.
- Oswald, Mr.*, a Scotchman, his reputed exchange of names with Bonaparte, iii. 259.
- Ouessant*, or Ushant, island of, called by the Bréton mariners Thulé, iii. 163.
- Oxen*, those fed in the Camargue, and manner of driving them to Toulon, ii. 395.

P.

- Pagan temples*, many in former times at Marseilles, ii. 15.—Destruction of them, ib. 16.
- Palais*, the place where the courts of justice are held, and why so called, i. 52.
- Palais-royal*, falsely esteemed the boast of Paris, rather its disgrace, i. 47.
- Palissy, Bernard*, a potter of Saintes, famous for staining glass, iii. 105.
- Palm-tree*, which bears dates, one at Hières, ii. 283.
- Panorama of Paris*, mode of taking it employed by Mr. Barker, i. 54.
- Pantbeon*, or church of St. Geneviève, at Paris, i. 45.
- Papon, Abbé*, his history of the French revolution, i. 99.
- Paris*, the approach to it from Calais very bad, i. 24.—Best ap-

INDEX.

437

- proach from the west, ib. ib.—Whether Paris or London be the finer city, ib. 35.—Unfinished state of many buildings, ib. 36.—State of society there at the conclusion of peace much misrepresented, ib. 147.
- Paris as it was and as it is*, the work earnestly recommended, i. 25:—also ib. 153 :—also ib. 219.
- Parrein*, president of the revolutionary tribunal at Lyons, i. 321.
- Pasquinade*, one circulated at Aix on Bonaparte's elevation to the imperial dignity, ii. 1382.
- Passady*, a part of the ceremonies in the Fête-Dieu at Aix, ii. 237.
- Passerilles*, the dried grapes at Lunel so called, iii. 13.
- Passports*, humorous description of the person given in them, i. 12.
- Pavia*, suppression of the insurrection there by Bonaparte examined, iii. 272.
- Pavillon-Chinois*, a summer coffee-house at Marseilles, ii. 186.
- Paul*, the chevalier, a French admiral, remarkable account of him, ii. 290.
- Peace*, examination whether it be possible to make peace with Bonaparte, iii. 389.
- Peasantry of Provence*, their temperate modes of living, ii. 453.
- Pelisson le Fontanier*, some particulars concerning him, iii. 31.
- Pelotte*, payment of the, a singular custom in Provence, ii. 235.
note.
- Penitents*, a religious order, their institutions, ii. 244.—Their processions, ib. 246.
- Penmarck*, point of, in Brétagne, ruins there called the city of Is, iii. 213.
- Pernon*, a merchant at Lyons, account of his arrest, i. 325.
- Perou*, a public walk at Montpellier, fine view from it, iii. 15.
- Perrache, Michel*, an architect of Lyons, his project of filling up part of the bed of the Rhone, i. 266.
- Peter's Hole*, near Aix, the habitation of a maniac, ii. 390.
- Petrarch and Laura*, ideas of the villagers of Vaucluse respecting them, i. 407.—Their pictures at the Mairie at Vaucluse, ib. 409.—Petrarch's account of his visit to the Saintè Beaume, ii. 316.
- Peyrols*, a village in the neighbourhood of Montpellier, a remarkable fossè there, iii. 23.
- Pezenas*, a pretty town in Languedoc, iii. 25.
- Phocæans*, the founders of Marseilles, ii. 6.—Their civil and religious institutions, ib. 11.

- Picardy*, the country very like Cambridgeshire, i. 19.
- Pichegru*, his conspiracies for restoring the monarchy; and inquiry concerning his death, iii. 334.
- Picture gallery*, at Paris, the architecture of it not uniform, i. 37.
- Pictures*, destruction of them at Lyons, i. 254:—and at Aix, ii. 334.—A celebrated one in the convent of the Chartreux near Marseilles, ii. 37.—Two very fine ones of the plague at Marseilles in the Hôtel de Ville, ib. 60.—A remarkable one in the Hôtel de Ville at Aix, ib. 334.—Old acquaintance found in the church of St. Sauveur at Aix, ib. 341.
- Pierre En-scize*, the prison of, at Lyons, and its demolition, i. 249.
- Pilate, Pontius*, his body reported to have been thrown into the Rhone at Vienne, i. 367.
- Pilon, St.*, the highest point of the mountain of the Sainte Beaume, ii. 314.
- Pioline, la*, a country-house near Aix, ii. 391.
- Piozzi, Mrs.*, her remarks upon some English nuns at Paris, i. 16.
- Pistachio nuts*, very excellent fresh from the tree, ii. 389.
- Pius the Sixth*, pope, his captivity at Valence, i. 369.—His heart sent to France, ii. 170.
- Places*, or squares, the principal ones in Paris, i. 53.
- Plague*, two fine paintings of it in the Hôtel de Ville at Marseilles, ii. 60.—A very fine piece of sculpture representing that at Milan in the Consigne, ib. 58.
- Planier*, a light-house on a rock near Marseilles, ii. 21.
- Plougaznou*, a town in Bretagne; miraculous finger there, iii. 172.—Extraordinary living character by name Lehlech, ib. 196.
- Poissonnerie*, new one built at Marseilles, ii. 86.
- P——*, Monsieur, a lawyer of Montpellier, his extraordinary indifference to the Roman remains at Nismes, iii. 9.—Civilities received from him and his wife, ib. 14.
- Polignac, Messieurs de*, Bonaparte's magnanimous conduct towards them, iii. 363.
- Pomègues*, a little island in the bay of Marseilles, ii. 70.
- Pompadour, Madame de*, extremely hated by the French, i. 82.
- Pondicherry*, French officer commanding there, rencontre with him in the diligence from Rennes to Morlaix, iii. 140.
- Pont-du Gard*, the fine Roman aqueduct so called, i. 418.
- Pontier, Monsieur*, a bookseller at Aix, his politeness and liberality, ii. 465.
- Pont-Neuf*, the principal bridge of Paris, i. 54.

- Pons, St.*, the valley of, very beautiful, ii. 258.
- Populace of Paris*, more civilized than the populace of London, i. 126.
- Population*, difference between the ancient and present population of Spain, iii. 346.
- Porral*, a Lyonnese, the extraordinary escape of himself and fourteen others from prison at Lyons, i. 346.
- Porrières*, the plain of, a great battle fought there by Caius Marius, ii. 385.
- Portrait de Michel Cervantes*, the play of, brought out at Paris, i. 75.
- Porzmarcb*, a king in Brétagne, a story related of him like that of Midas, iii. 215.
- Prince of Love*, his lieutenant and suite, a part of the procession of the Fête-Dieu at Aix, ii. 234.
- Procession* to Nôtre-Dame for the restoration of public worship, i. 122.—Procession in honour of St. Victor at Marseilles, ii. 28.—Procession of the Fête-Dieu at Aix, order of it, ib. 238.—Procession of the camel at Beziers, iii. 28.
- Protestant preacher*, an excellent one at Marseilles, ii. 172.
- Protestants* and Catholics, friendly terms on which they live together at Marseilles, ii. 243.
- Provençal*, the, a remarkable prisoner in the Recluses at Lyons, i. 207.
- Provençal language*, its antiquity, and some specimens of it, ii. 462.
- Provençals*, character given of them by a writer of Languedoc, ii. 468.
- Provençaux*, their character, ii. 442.—Many instances of resemblance between them and the English, ib. 447.—Instances of the generosity of the Provençal character, ib. 451.—Temperate lives of the peasantry of Provence, ib. 453.
- Prud'hommes*, jurisdiction of, at Marseilles, ii. 59.
- Prussian lady*, Bonaparte's generosity to her, iii. 364.
- Publications*, numerous ones relating to the royal family of France, i. 184.
- Public library*, a very fine one at Lyons, i. 259.—Also at Toulouse, iii. 58.—One intended at Marseilles, ii. 38.
- Puget*, a celebrated painter, sculptor and architect, a native of Marseilles, ii. 45.
- Pythear*, a celebrated navigator of Marseilles in ancient times, ii. 39.

Q.

- Quays*, at Paris, a great ornament to the town, i. 35.—The markets held upon them, ib. 86.—Quay of St. Clair at Lyons very fine, ii. 248.—A very fine one along the Garonne at Bordeaux, iii. 91.
- Quimper*, a town in Brétagne, story of a merchant there and his friend, the origin of one of Sancho's judgements at Barataria, iii. 215.

R.

- Rainbow*, fine effect of one seen at Montpellier, iii. 15.
- Ramolini*, the family of Bonaparte's mother, their illustrious connexions, iii. 105.
- Rapba l, Patron*, a Genoese, trick played him by a woman of Marseilles, ii. 105.
- Ratoneau*, a little island in the bay of Marseilles. account of a lunatic there, ii. 70.
- Ravaillac*, anecdote respecting his assassination of Henry the Fourth, i. 378.
- Raz.* point of, on the coast of Brétagne, a terrible sea there, iii. 214.
- Recluseries*, places of religious seclusion at Lyons so called, i. 265.
- Recluses*, the prison of the, at Lyons, i. 288.—Motley group of prisoners there, ib. 290.—Manner in which the imprisoned during the revolution passed their time, ib. 304.
- Religion*, mankind naturally prone to it, i. 120.—State of it in France during the revolution, and at present, ib. 129.—Footing on which it is now placed in France, ib. 136.
- Religious liberty*, Bonaparte's endeavours to establish it all over Europe, iii. 384.
- Remi, St.*, Roman monuments there, i. 446.
- René, king*, count of Provence, his chimney at Marseilles, ii. 5.—Ceremonies of the Fête-Dieu at Aix instituted by him, ib. 220.—Dispute about his body, ib. 342.—Paintings by him, ib. 344.—His drinking-glass, ib. 345.
- Rennes*, the capital of Brétagne, horrible inn there, iii. 134.
- Requisition*, abuses which arose from it at Marseilles, ii. 98.—A remarkable anecdote relating to them, ib. 128.

INDEX.

441

- Reservoir*, a curious one made by Caius Marius at the Tolonet near Aix, ii. 384.—A curious modern one at La Gaude, ib. 390.
- Retz, maréchal de*, odd story upon record at Nantes concerning him, iii. 133.
- Revolutionary tribunal*, the characters of the judges who composed that at Lyons, i. 321.—Manner of judging the prisoners there, ib. 330.—Manner in which that at Orange was established, ib. 373.—Establishment of one at Marseilles, and summary mode of proceeding at it, ii. 91.
- Rhone*, confluence of this river with the Saone at Lyons, i. 266.—Its waters remarkable for keeping well, ib. 279.—The banks of the river from Lyons to Avignon very beautiful, ib. 365.—Divided into two branches at Avignon, ib. 388.—Changes which have taken place in its course, ib. 393.
- Riquet, Paul*, engineer of the canal of Languedoc, a native of Beziers, iii. 50.
- Roads*, two different ones from Paris to Lyons, i. 220.—Indifferent state of the roads in France, ib. 447 :—also iii. 137.
- Roanne*, a town in the district of Le Forez, i. 227.
- Robbers*, a troop of, in the wood of the Sainte Beaume, a great annoyance to the country, ii. 309.
- Roespierre*, anecdote respecting his downfall, i. 376.
- Rochefort*, the town of, iii. 107.
- Rocbelle*, the town of, iii. 107.
- Rock*, a remarkable fallen one near Roquevaire, ii. 296.
- Rœderer*, generous conduct of Bonaparte towards him, iii. 361.
- Roman baths*, discovery of those at Nismes, i. 434 :—and of those at Aix, ii. 322.
- Roman towers*, three very fine ones at Aix, demolished just before the revolution, ii. 327.
- Roman wall*, curious remains of one at the Tolonet near Aix, ii. 384.
- Ropemakers*, a class held in great contempt in Brétagne, iii. 233.
- Roquevaire*, a town in Provence, famous for its muscat grapes, ii. 296.—The fallen rock near the town, ib. ib.
- Roscoff*, a small port on the northern coast of Brétagne, iii. 158.
- Rouen*, merchants of, anecdote of them and Bonaparte, iii. 360.
- Roumaragi*, a name given to the country feasts in Provence, ii. 200.—One held on the mountain of Nôtre-Dame des Anges, ib. ib.—One at the Tolonet, the seat of Monsieur de Galifet, ib. 388.—One in the Garagai on the mountain of Sainte Victoire, ib. 409.
- Rovere*, the ci-devant marquis de Fontvielle, manner in which he

- imposed upon a merchant of Marseilles, ii. 210.—Attachment shown him by his wife, ib. 212.
Rudenschild, madame de, a noted Swedish lady, ii. 176.
Russia, emperor Alexander of, his admiration of Bonaparte, iii. 360.

S.

- Sabreurs*, or Chevaliers du Soleil, at Marseilles, their outrageous conduct, ii. 135.
Sainte Beaume, the grotto of, ii. 303.—Adventure in the wood near it, ib. 309.—The burial-place of Mary Magdalen, ib. 319.
Santes, a town on the Charente, the capital of Saintonge, iii. 105.
Sainval, Mademoiselle, a celebrated actress, anecdote of her, i. 66.
Salo, Bonaparte accused of burying the wounded with the dead there, iii. 273.
Salon, in Provence, imposition practised on a blacksmith of that place, ii. 363.
Saturnin, or Sermin, St., the patron of Toulouse, manner of his death, iii. 42.
Sauveur, St., cathedral of, at Aix, ii. 340.—Paintings behind the altar there, ib. 341.
Science and literature, state of them during the revolution, i. 95.
Scorpions, a small species of them in Provence, ii. 437.
Sculpture, the objects of Grecian sculpture obtained by France from Italy, a retaliation for the plunder of Greece, iii. 352.
Secretary of Bonaparte, his complaint of having too much work, and Bonaparte's answer, iii. 367.
Sein, an islet off the coast of Brétagne, the reputed birth-place of the enchanter Merlin, iii. 214.
Seine, the, not so fine a river as the Thames, i. 36.
Sion, a beautiful valley near Marseilles, ii. 3.
Sermons, a collection of, recovered by a priest, and his joy on the occasion, ii. 38.
Sevigné, madame de, her body found in the church of Grignan on its being demolished in the revolution, i. 371.—Original pictures of her and Madame de Grignan in the house of Monsieur Gibelin at Aix, ii. 362.
Sextius Calvinus, the founder of Aix, ii. 321.—A bust of him upon a fountain in the Place des Précheurs, ib. 340.
Seyne, a small fishing-town on the bay of Toulon, ii. 278.
Shakespeare, some remarks upon his writings, i. 60.

INDEX.

443

- Shaw*, colonel, odd mistake of some French gentlemen with regard to his name, iii. 141.
- Sleep* and goats, their journeys to the mountains, ii. 397.
- Silk worms*, manner of feeding them, i. 277.
- Sixfours*, the hill and village of, near Toulon, fine view from it, ii. 286.—Disinterestedness of the villagers there, ib. 288.
- Sleepers*, seven brethren sleeping till the resurrection in the abbey of St. Victor, at Marseilles, ii. 31.
- Soap*, the staple article of commerce at Marseilles, ii. 147.
- Society*, different classes into which it was divided at Paris after the revolution, i. 161.
- Sœurs de la charité*, the order to be restored, iii. 33.
- Song* made at Marseilles in consequence of the maximum, ii. 103.
- Sorèze*, the academy of, in Languedoc, iii. 38.—Hard fate of its founder, ib. 39.
- Soubry*, the aged, a prisoner in the Recluses at Lyons, i. 310.
- Spain*, difference between its former and present population, iii. 346.
- Spanish disputes*, impolicy of interfering in them, iii. 342.
- Stage*, the French and English compared, i. 58.
- Stag-bunt*, one by lamp-light given by the prince de Condé at Chantilly, i. 21.
- Stone-benge*, similar stones in several parts of Brétagne, iii. 182.
- Storm*, a considerable one in passing from Dover to Calais, i. 8.—A much more violent one in passing from Morlaix to Plymouth, iii. 236.
- Sulpice, St.*, at Paris, a very fine church, i. 44.
- Supernatural inspiration*, curious account of a girl at Lyons who pretended to it, i. 264.
- Superstitions* of Brétagne, several of them related, iii. 177.
- S——*, Monsieur, remarkable trial of him at Aix for murder, ii. 371.
- Surin, St.*, the church of at Bordeaux, iii. 95.

T.

- Tailors*, prejudice against them in Brétagne, iii. 232.
- Tallien*, Madame, anecdote concerning her, i. 376.
- Talma*, the principal tragic actor at Paris, i. 64.—His reformation of the costume of the stage, ib. 68.—Reckoned like Bonaparte, ib. 110.

- Tapestry*, that of the Gobelins, i. 191.—That of Aubusson, ib. 193.
- Tarare*, the great hill of, i. 230.—The opera of, performed at Montpellier, iii. 22.
- Tarascon*, the town of, in Provence, why so called, i. 441.—Tomb of St. Martha in the great church there, ib. ib.
- Tarasque*, procession of the, at Tarascon, i. 442.
- Tardieu*, servant to Monsieur de Jouques at Aix, his preservation of his master's property, ii. 356.
- Taureau, Cbateau*, a fortress at the entrance of the bay of Morlaix, iii. 157.
- Temporary commission*, the, at Lyons, its functions, i. 320.
- Terreaux, place des*, the second square in Lyons, i. 251.
- Territory of Marseill:s*, manner in which it is laid out, ii. 195.
- Terror*, reign of, the state of alarm in which families lived at Marseilles during that period, ii. 110.
- Tbau, Etang de*, a fine piece of water on the coast of Languedoc, iii. 25.
- Theatres*.—Those at Paris—The Grand Opera, i. 57.—The Théâtre Français, ib. 58.—Théâtre Feydeau, ib. 69.—Théâtre du Vaudeville, ib. 73.—Théâtre Favart, ib. 74.—Théâtre Louvois, ib. ib. Théâtre Montausier, ib. 75.—Théâtre des jeunes Artistes, ib. ib.—Ambigu-comique, ib. 76.—Good order observed at the French theatres, ib. 77.—Theatre at Lyons, ib. 273.—Grand theatre at Marseilles, ii. 180.—A new one just built at Marseilles, ib. 181.—A private one, ib. 182.—Theatre at Aix, and cool mode of condemning a piece there, ib. 352.—Theatre at Nismes, iii. 10.
- Theatre at Montpellier, ib. 16.—Theatre at Toulouse, ib. 65.—Theatre at Bordeaux the handsomest in France, ib. 96.
- Thermolampes*, a new invention at Paris, now called gas-lights, i. 100.
- Tbibauveau*, Monsieur, the new prefect at Marseilles, ii. 215.—His plan for a house of industry there, ib. 216.—Games on the water given by him on the fourteenth of July, ib. 251.
- Tbuilleries*, gardens of the, at Paris, i. 39.
- Tbunny fisbery*, near Marseilles, the manner of it, ii. 75.
- Tivoli*, the gardens of, a place of amusement at Paris, i. 80.—A place of amusement so called at Aix, ii. 355.
- Tolonet*, the, a seat of Monsieur de Galifet near Aix, ii. 384.—Remains of a Roman wall there, ib. ib.—A great Roumaragi held there, ib. 388.
- Torque*, a species of cake common in Provence so called, ii. 389.

- Toulon*, at first celebrated only as a place for dyeing, ii. 271.—First fortified by Henry the Fourth, ib. 272.—The arsenal established by Louis the Fourteenth, ib. 273.—The bason for careening vessels, ib. 274.—The model-room, ib. 276.—The bay particularly beautiful, ib. 278.
- Toulouse*, extent of the town, iii. 40.—Its antiquity, ib. 41.—Strange ceremony instituted there by Charlemagne, ib. 44.—The Hôtel de Ville, ib. ib.—The Floral Games, ib. 47.—The museum and public libraries, ib. 58.—The school of artillery, ib. 64.—Scotch gentleman and his wife at the hotel there, ib. ib.
- Tournefort*, the botanist, a native of Aix, ii. 360,—His adventure herborizing in the Pyrenees, ib. ib.
- Tournon*, a famous seminary of education before the revolution, i. 368.
- Trou*, Lou San, a cavity in Provence, the supposed crater of a volcano, ii. 267.
- Travaux Perrache*, a spot just without Lyons, formed by filling up a part of the Rhone, i. 266.
- Travelling post* in France, a change in the mode of regulating it recommended, i. 17.
- Trépassés*, Baye des, on the coast of Bretagne, why so called, iii. 214.
- Trials*, remarkable one at Aix of Monsieur S——— for murder, ii. 371 :—also of Hypolite, a notorious malefactor, ib. 380.
- Trianon*, le petit, very much dilapidated in the revolution, i. 215.
- Tribunals*, the, of law for civil causes how constituted, ii. 368.—The criminal tribunal, ib. 371 : and ib. 375.
- Trombe*, a tube used in Languedoc at the iron foundries instead of bellows, iii. 71.
- Trompette*, chateau, a fortress at Bordeaux, iii. 93.
- Tucbins*, a troop of banditti in former times in Provence so called, i. 389.
- Tulin*, Monsieur, his views of the ruins of Carthage, ii. 176.
- Turtle*, small ones sometimes caught near Marseilles, ii. 74.
- Twelfth-day*, observance of it in France, ii. 162.

V.

- Valence*, a town in Provence where pope Pius the Sixth was imprisoned and died, i. 369.
- Vaucluse*, adventure of two English travellers going thither, i. 400.—Imperfect idea given of the spot by the descriptions, ib. 401.—Reputed adventure of two Englishmen in the cavern, ib. 405,—

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-08103-0 - A Narrative of Three Years' Residence in France, Principally in the Southern Departments, from the Year 1802 to 1805: Volume 3

Anne Plumptre

Index

More information

446

INDEX.

- Ideas of the villagers here respecting Petrarch and Laura, ib. 407.
 —Pictures of these two lovers at the Mairie at Vauclose, ib. 409.
 —Aqueduct from Vauclose to Arles, ib. 412.
- Vaudeville, Théâtre du*, at Paris, i. 73.—Soupers du Vaudeville, ib. 74.
- Vauvenargues*, a village near Aix, ii. 402.—Conspiracy against admitting the god Somnus into the inn there, ib. 403.
- Vaux d'Ollioules*, a sublime pass among the rocks near Toulon, ii. 265.—Rencontre there with a gentleman who had been at the siege of Toulon, ib. 268.
- Vegetables*, particularly fine ones about Aix, ii. 434.
- Velocifères*, a species of public carriage attempted to be introduced in France, iii. 147.
- Velvet Pictures*, beautiful ones manufactured by Monsieur Gregoire of Aix, i. 198.
- Vendée, la*, desolated state of the towns and villages there, iii. 109.—Particulars relating to the war in these parts, ib. 110.—The Vendéans considered as a remnant of the Huns, ib. 128.—Bad dialect spoken there, and anecdote respecting it, ib. 129.
- Vendémiaire*, thirteenth of, insurrection at Paris on that day, suppressed by Bonaparte, iii. 270.
- Vernet*, the painter, a native of Marseilles, ii. 45.—Anecdote respecting his painting the sea-ports of France, ib. 46.
- Versailles*, the situation very bad, i. 211.—Length of the grand front, ib. ib.—Pictures of Louis the Sixteenth and his queen, mystery with which they were shown, ib. 214.—The petit Trianon, ib. 215.—Statue of Marcus Curtius, ib. 216.—Mrs. Wolstonecroft's apostrophe to the reputed desolate state of this place, ib. 217.—The king's library, ib. 218.
- Victoire, Sainte*, a mountain near Aix, the origin of its name, ii. 386.—Excursion thither, ib. 400.—Image of the Virgin preserved during the revolution, ib. 409.—Foolish attempt at climbing the mountain made by three young men, ib. 410.—Melancholy fate of a priest, ib. 411.—Second excursion thither, ib. 413.
- Victor, St.*, abbey of, at Marseilles, ii. 24.—The saint a Christian warrior and martyr, ib. 26.—His combat with a dragon, ib. 28.—Procession in honour of him, ib. ib.—Chapel of the holy Virgin in the abbey, ib. 30.—Subterranean vaults to the abbey, ib. 31.—The chapter secularized, ib. 32.—Destruction of the abbey, ib. 33.
- Vienne*, in Dauphiné, a very old town, i. 366.—Pier of a bridge there, supposed the first built in France, ib. 367.—The body of

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-08103-0 - A Narrative of Three Years' Residence in France, Principally in the Southern Departments, from the Year 1802 to 1805: Volume 3

Anne Plumptre

Index

More information

INDEX.

447

- Pontius Pilate supposed to have been thrown into the Rhone there, ib. ib.—The place much subject to violent storms, ib. 368.
- Villars*, duke of, once governor of Provence, his eccentric conduct, ii. 337.—His liberal bequests to the town of Aix, ib. 339.
- Villeneuve*, the town of, in Languedoc, i. 416.
- Vines*, method of cultivating them in Provence and Languedoc, ii. 425 :—and in the Bordelais, iii. 101.
- Viste, la*, the mountain of, near Marseilles, striking view from it, ii. 1.
- Voituriers*, at Avignon, their competition for customers, i. 379.
- Volney*, anecdote of him when at Marseilles, ii. 430.

U.

- Unjust judge*, horrible picture in the gallery at Paris of the unjust judge flayed alive by order of Cambyses, i. 27.
- Urfe, Honoré d'*, a native of Marseilles, some account of him, ii. 47.
- Uskant*, or Ouessant, the island of, off the coast of Brétagne, called by the Bréton mariners Thulé, iii. 163.

W.

- War*, some remarks on the impolicy of renewing it, ii. 217.
- Warm springs*, at Aix, recovery of them, ii. 322.—A fountain from them upon the Course, ib. 327.—Another in the Rue Orbitelle, ib. 340.
- Washing*, mode of it in France, i. 55.
- Water*, manner of raising it about Marseilles for watering the grounds, ii. 197.
- Weddings*, mode of celebrating them in France, ii. 165.
- Wbist*, different manner of playing in France and in England, ii. 184.
- Willot*, one of the deported deputies to Cayenne, ii. 214.
- Wilson, Sir Robert*, his charge against Bonaparte of massacring his prisoners at Jaffa examined, iii. 275 :—and of poisoning his sick, ib. 292.
- Wittman, Dr.* his testimony concerning Bonaparte's massacre of his prisoners examined, iii. 282 :—and of poisoning his sick, ib. 301.
- Wood of the Sainte Beaume*, alarming adventure there, ii. 309.

X. Y. Z.