

Contents

---

Acknowledgements	page xiii
Introduction: Difference and Disease	1
Difference and the Postcolonial History of Colonial Medicine	6
Part I Locality
1 ‘The Same Diseases Here as in Europe’? Health and Locality Before 1700	25
1.1 A Hippocratic Revival	30
1.2 The Flexibility of the Hippocratic Tradition	38
1.3 Local Knowledge and Medical Expertise	44
Conclusion	55
2 Changes in the Air: William Hillary and English Medicine in the West Indies, 1720–1760	57
2.1 A Rational and Mechanical Essay	61
2.2 Weathering Epidemics	65
2.3 From Bath to Barbados	68
2.4 Yellow Fever	74
2.5 Slavery, Nativity, and the Production of Similarity	80
Conclusion	86
Part II Empire
3 Seasoning Sickness and the Imaginative Geography of the British Empire	91
3.1 Seasoning on the Periphery	94
3.2 Seasoning an Empire	101
Conclusion	111

xii	Contents
4	Imperial Medicine and the Putrefactive Paradigm, 1720–1800	112
	Introduction	112
	4.1 Tropical Climates in Metropolitan Medicine	119
	4.2 Towards a New Putrescent Medicine	123
	4.3 John Pringle: The Putrefactive Turn	129
	4.4 Putrefaction in the Periphery	136
	4.5 The End of the Putrefactive Paradigm	146
	Conclusion	159
	Part III Race
5	Race-Medicine in the Colonies, 1679–1750	167
	Introduction	167
	5.1 Race: The Terms of the Debate in the Early Enlightenment	174
	5.2 Gender, Medicine, and Climate	179
	5.3 Race and Medicine, 1679–1740	188
	5.4 A Little Heterodox: John Atkins, Polygenism, and African Diseases	196
6	Race, Slavery, and Polygenism: Edward Long and The History of Jamaica	208
	6.1 Anti-Abolitionism and The Somerset Case	213
	6.2 Slavery and The History of Jamaica	220
	6.3 Special Creation and the Problem of Race	228
	6.4 Polygenism, Theology, Materialism	237
	Conclusion	238
7	Pathologies of Blackness: Race-Medicine, Slavery, and Abolitionism	241
	7.1 Medicine and Abolitionism	250
	7.2 Race, Climate, Disease	260
	7.3 Racial Pathologies	265
	Conclusion	275
	Conclusion: Place, Race, and Empire	277
	Locality and Expertise	277
	Race and Place	280
	Medicine and the Making of Empire	287
	Bibliography	291
	Index	319