

THE CAMBRIDGE COMPANION TO
APOCALYPTIC LITERATURE

Jewish and Christian apocalypses have captivated theologians, writers, artists, and the general public for centuries, and have had a profound influence on world history from their initial production by persecuted Jews during the second century BCE to the birth of Christianity—through the demise of the Western Roman Empire and the medieval period, and continuing into modernity. Far from being an outlier concern, or an academic one that may be relegated to the dustbin of history, apocalyptic thinking is ubiquitous and continues to inform nearly all aspects of modern-day life. It addresses universal human concerns: the search for identity and belonging, speculation about the future, and (for some) a blueprint that provides meaning and structure to a seemingly chaotic world. The Cambridge Companion to Apocalyptic Literature brings together a field of leading experts to provide a comprehensive overview of the subject.

COLIN MCALLISTER is Assistant Professor of Music at the University of Colorado, Colorado Springs. His publications include The Vanguard Guitar (2004) and Fourteenth Century Counterpoint: Music of the Chantilly Codex (2005) as well as a translation of the Cambridge Glossa in Apocalypsin (forthcoming). He directs the annual Through a Glass Darkly: Symposium on Apocalypica.

Acknowledgements

One of the main functions of apocalyptic literature is to maintain and validate group identity. At one such group gathering, the North American Patristics Society annual meeting in Chicago in May 2016, I met Beatrice Rehl of Cambridge University Press, and our ensuing discussions resulted in the volume you now hold in your hands. I thank Beatrice for her wisdom, guidance, and patience these past three years.

It is my privilege to offer my profound gratitude to those who have helped this project come to fruition: To my contributing authors—thank you for entrusting me with your words and ideas. The support and collegiality I have experienced with all of you means more to me than I can say. John J. Collins, Brian Duvick, Lorenzo DiTommaso, and Frank Gumerlock have not only been collaborators, but also mentors, and I thank them for their time and passion for our discipline.

I first met many of these authors—and preliminary versions of some of these chapters were first aired—at the “Through a Glass Darkly” symposium, which I have organized yearly at the Heller Center for Arts & Humanities on the campus of the University of Colorado, Colorado Springs (UCCS), since 2015. This symposium would not be possible without the generous support of numerous entities and individuals at UCCS: the Humanities Program (Teresa Meadows and Dorothea Olkowski, former and current chairs), the Department of Visual and Performing Arts (Suzanne MacAulay, Chair), the Department of History (Christina Jiménez, Chair), the Heller Center for Arts & Humanities (Rhonda Goodman-Gaghan, Curator), and the Center for Religious Diversity and Public Life (Jeffrey Scholes, Director). I also want to thank Bernard McGinn, who was a gracious guest at the first edition of the symposium. Although I never had the privilege of studying under him, he continues to be a wonderful mentor from a distance.

To my additional colleagues at UCCS—thank you for making our campus a locus amoenus to pursue interdisciplinary research, teaching, and collaboration. Many of you have offered support and xvi Acknowledgements

encouragement along the way, especially Peter Braza, Mary France, Katherine Guinness, Kevin Landis, Roger Martínez-Dávila, Jane Rigler, Rob Sackett, Michaela Steen, Rex Welshon, and Glen Whitehead.

To all of my students who have enrolled in my Humanities 3990 course on apocalypticism, and especially to Don Unger, my fabulous teaching and research assistant—thank you for reading draft versions of several of these papers, and for your open-mindedness, honesty, and collaborative elan.

A special thanks to my friend James Romano, fellow Manitou Springs resident and Affiliate Assistant Professor of New Testament at Fuller Theological Seminary, who provided invaluable assistance and insights during the final editing process. His keen eye and expertise rescued me from many lapses.

Most importantly, I wish to thank my family: my parents Newman and Bonny McAllister, and my brother David (who first encouraged me to take up the study of Latin, and whose love of learning continues to inspire me). To my children—Cameron, Cayla, Dana, and Lisa—thank you for putting up with the constant stacks of books on the dining room table, and my frequent weekend and evening mental absences as I pondered the end of the world. Finally, to my darling wife Barbara, I owe everything . . . te amaré hasta el fin de los tiempos querida!
