

The Cambridge Handbook for the Anthropology of Gender and Sexuality

The tense but enduring engagement between anthropology and gender and sexuality studies has had profound effects on anthropological theory and practice. Bringing together contributions from an international team of authors, this Handbook shows that anthropological work has taken inspiration from feminist and LGBTQI movements to create a transformative body of research. It provides an accessible, state-of-the-art overview of the anthropology of gender and sexuality while also documenting its historical emergence, highlighting the varied impact gender and sexuality studies have had on anthropological theory. It is split into five parts, with each chapter introducing a contemporary anthropological theory through in-depth ethnographical discussion. It features intersectional, Black, and Indigenous authors, providing a forum for established and emerging voices to gesture toward futures of anthropology of gender and sexuality. Authoritative and cutting-edge, it is essential reading for researchers and students in anthropology, and will set the agenda for future research in the field.

CECILIA MCCALLUM is a social anthropologist specializing in gender, health, reproduction, sexuality, kinship, personhood, and sociality in Brazil. She is known for her work on Indigenous Amazonia and on Bahia and has published in leading journals on a wide range of topics.

SILVIA POSOCCO is a social anthropologist with interdisciplinary research interests in gender and sexuality studies and violence, conflict, and genocide studies. Posocco's research has focused on insurgent movements in Guatemala, the archives of transnational adoption across sites and temporalities, and, most recently, forensic archives, bioinformation, and data worlds.

MARTIN FOTTA is a social anthropologist with interest in peripatetic economic strategies, welfare state transformations, violence, and masculinity. His current project explores racialization of Romanies across the Portuguese-language Atlantic.
