

CAUSATION IN COMPETITION LAW DAMAGES ACTIONS

Competition law damages actions are often characterized by the uncertainty of the causal connection between the infringement and the harm. The damage consists in a pure economic loss flowing from an anticompetitive conduct. In such cases, the complexity of the markets' structures, combined with the interdependence of individuals' assets, fuel this causal uncertainty. In this work, Claudio Lombardi elucidates the concept of causation in competition law damages actions and outlines its practical implications in competition litigation through the comparative analysis of the relevant statutory and case law, primarily in the European Union. This book should be read by practitioners, scholars, and graduate students with experience in competition law, as well as those interested in analyzing economic torts and causation in general.

CLAUDIO LOMBARDI is an assistant professor at KIMEP University's School of Law. He previously served as a visiting research fellow at University College London and at the University of Cambridge, Faculty of Law. Before that, he was a postdoctoral research fellow at the Max Planck Institute for Comparative and International Private Law and the Europa-Kolleg, Hamburg and a visiting lecturer at the International University College of Turin and at Trinity College Dublin, School of Law.

GLOBAL COMPETITION LAW AND ECONOMICS POLICY

This series publishes monographs highlighting the interdisciplinary and multijurisdictional nature of competition law, economics, and policy. Global in coverage, the series should appeal to competition and antitrust specialists working as scholars, practitioners, and judges.

Acknowledgements

This book is based on a doctoral thesis I defended at the University of Trento in March 2015. Since then, many people and places have contributed to its development.

I am deeply indebted to Peter Behrens for hosting me at the Europa-Kolleg Institute for European Integration in Hamburg and for the many inspiring conversations.

I also thank Jürgen Basedow for giving me the opportunity to conduct most of my research at the Max Planck Institute for Comparative and International Private Law, Hamburg, and for sharing with me his ideas on the book's topic. I am very grateful to Okeoghene Odudu for hosting me at the University of Cambridge and for our inspiring conversations, and I thank Andelka Phillips for having me as visiting professor at Trinity College Dublin and for being a stimulating colleague. Similarly, I would also like to thank Ioannis Lianos for hosting me at the UCL in London. All these universities and hosts have provided a perfect environment to conduct research and write this book. In this vein, I want to thank Martins Paparinskis and Meagan Wong for the continuous encouragement and for their friendship inside and outside the walls of the UCL in London. My gratitude goes also to Alexey Ivanov for the period I spent at the HSE in Moscow and for our friendship afterwards. Moreover, I would like to thank Saira Mian for her uplifting example as a researcher and as a person and for the many inspiring conversations, and Marina Chang for being a similarly stimulating colleague in London.

I am also deeply indebted to Joseph Luke, dean of the Faculty of Law of KIMEP University for his comments on the first draft of this book, for his support, and for the motivation to move faster when I needed it most.

Finally, I would like to thank my family and my wife for their encouragement and support throughout my writing. Without them, it would not even make sense to write a book.
