

LAW AND LITERATURE

Law and Literature presents an authoritative, fresh and accessible new overview of the many ways in which law and literature interact. Written by a team of international experts, it provides a multifocused history of literary studies' critical interest in ideas of law and justice. It examines the effects of law on writers and their work, ranging from classical tragedy to comics, and from East Africa to Elizabethan England. Over twenty chapters, contributors reveal the evolving and polyvalent historical associations between law and literature, both past and present, and trace the intellectual genesis of the concept of law in literary studies, focusing on major developments in the history of the interdisciplinary project of law and literature, as well as the changing ideas of law, and the cultural contests in which it has figured. Law and Literature will appeal to graduates and scholars working on the intersection between law and literature and in key related areas such as literature and human rights.

KIERAN DOLIN is Associate Professor of English and Cultural Studies at the University of Western Australia. He is the author of Fiction and the Law (1999) and A Critical Introduction to Law and Literature (2007).

CAMBRIDGE CRITICAL CONCEPTS SERIES

Cambridge Critical Concepts focuses on the important ideas animating twentieth- and twenty-first-century literary studies. Each concept addressed in this series has had a profound impact on literary studies, as well as on other disciplines, and already has a substantial critical bibliography surrounding it. This new series captures the dynamic critical energies transmitted across twentieth- and twenty-first-century literary landscapes: the concepts critics bring to reading, interpretation, and criticism. By addressing the origins, development, and application of these ideas, the books collate and clarify how these particular concepts have developed, while also featuring fresh insights and establishing new lines of inquiry.

Cambridge Critical Concepts shifts the focus from period- or genre-based literary studies of a key term to the history and development of the terms themselves. Broad and detailed contributions cumulatively identify and investigate the various historical and cultural catalysts that made these critical concepts emerge as established twenty-first-century landmarks in the discipline. The level will be suitable for advanced undergraduates, graduates, and specialists, as well as to those teaching outside their own research areas, and will have cross-disciplinary relevance for subjects such as history and philosophy.

Acknowledgments

Many people have helped in bringing this volume to fruition. I am especially grateful to Ray Ryan of Cambridge University Press for his support and belief in the project at key stages of its development. I must also thank Edgar Mendez and other staff at Cambridge University Press for their ready assistance with administrative and production matters. I also wish to record my appreciation of the work of all the contributors for their keen engagement in the aims of the volume. I particularly acknowledge Peter Leman, Mark Fortier, and Diana Shahinyan for stepping into their roles late in the writing period, and Klaus Stierstorfer for timely and sage advice. Many colleagues and friends at the University of Western Australia have taken an encouraging interest in or made suggestions toward the progress of this collection, particularly Ned Curthoys, Tony Hughes-d'Aeth, Judy Johnston (now in Wollongong), Andrew Lynch, Alexandra Ludewig, Jani McCutcheon, Philip Mead, and Bob White. I am very grateful to Steven de Haer for his indispensable assistance with the bibliography and the preparation of the manuscript. My deepest thanks go to my family, whose support and love have been constant and sustaining.
