

INTERNATIONAL LAW AND HISTORY

This interdisciplinary exploration of the modern historiography of international law invites a diverse assessment of the indissoluble unity of the old and the new in the most global of all legal disciplines. The study of the history of international law does not only serve a better understanding of how international law has evolved to become what it is and what it is not. Its histories, which rethink the past in the present, also influence our perception of contemporary matters in international law and our understandings of how they may potentially unfold. This multi-perspectival enquiry into the dominant modes of international legal history and its fundamental debates may also help students of both international law and history to identify the historical approaches that best suit their international legal-historical perspectives and best address their historical and legal research questions.

IGNACIO DE LA RASILLA holds the Han Depei Chair in Public International Law and is a One Thousand Talents Plan Professor at the Wuhan University Institute of International Law in China. He is the author or editor of five books on international law and its histories including Experiments in International Adjudication (Cambridge University Press, 2019).

CAMBRIDGE STUDIES IN INTERNATIONAL AND COMPARATIVE LAW: 152

Established in 1946, this series produces high quality, reflective and innovative scholarship in the field of public international law. It publishes works on international law that are of a theoretical, historical, cross-disciplinary or doctrinal nature. The series also welcomes books providing insights from private international law, comparative law and transnational studies which inform international legal thought and practice more generally.

The series seeks to publish views from diverse legal traditions and perspectives, and of any geographical origin. In this respect it invites studies offering regional perspectives on core problématiques of international law, and in the same vein, it appreciates contrasts and debates between diverging approaches. Accordingly, books offering new or less orthodox perspectives are very much welcome. Works of a generalist character are greatly valued and the series is also open to studies on specific areas, institutions or problems. Translations of the most outstanding works published in other languages are also considered.

After seventy years, Cambridge Studies in International and Comparative Law sets the standard for international legal scholarship and will continue to define the discipline as it evolves in the years to come.

Series Editors

Larissa van den Herik

Professor of Public International Law, Grotius Centre for International Legal Studies, Leiden University

Jean d'Aspremont

Professor of International Law, University of Manchester and Sciences Po Law School

A list of books in the series can be found at the end of this volume.

INTERNATIONAL LAW AND HISTORY

Modern Interfaces

IGNACIO DE LA RASILLA
Wuhan University

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Shaftesbury Road, Cambridge CB2 8EA, United Kingdom
One Liberty Plaza, 20th Floor, New York, NY 10006, USA
477 Williamstown Road, Port Melbourne, VIC 3207, Australia
314–321, 3rd Floor, Plot 3, Splendor Forum, Jasola District Centre, New Delhi – 110025, India
103 Penang Road, #05–06/07, Visioncrest Commercial, Singapore 238467

Cambridge University Press is part of Cambridge University Press & Assessment, a department of the University of Cambridge.

We share the University's mission to contribute to society through the pursuit of education, learning and research at the highest international levels of excellence.

www.cambridge.org
Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9781108461481

DOI: 10.1017/9781108562003

© Cambridge University Press & Assessment 2021

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press & Assessment.

First published 2021
First paperback edition 2023

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library

ISBN 978-1-108-47340-8 Hardback
ISBN 978-1-108-46148-1 Paperback

Cambridge University Press & Assessment has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

To the white angels of Wuhan and elsewhere

For those who aim to find their intellectual standpoint in this world and who, accordingly, are used to viewing the world as historians

Wolfgang Preiser, 1984

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction	1
1 The Turn to the History of International Law	11
1.1 Introduction	11
1.2 Some Whats and Whys of the Turn to the History of International Law	15
1.3 Engaging with Earlier Histories of International Law	20
1.4 Stasis and Change in the History of International Law	30
1.5 The Contribution of Historical Writing to Knowledge Production Processes	35
1.6 Conclusion: The Uses of the History of International Law	38
2 Contextual Approaches to the History of International Law	41
2.1 Introduction	41
2.2 Themis and Clio, or the Radiography of an Inconstant Affair	44
2.3 The Contextual Turn in the History of International Law	52
2.4 The Contextualist Impact on Knowledge Production Processes	57
2.5 Historiographical Debates, Confluences, and Critiques	60
2.6 Conclusion	71
3 Critical/Postmodern Approaches to the History of International Law	75
3.1 Introduction	75
3.2 The Critical Revamping of International Legal Scholarship	79
3.3 Critical Histories of International Law	91
3.4 The Critical Impact on Knowledge Production Processes	100
3.5 Historiographical Debates, Confluences, and Critiques	105
3.6 Conclusion	114

- 4 TWAIL/Post-colonial Approaches to the History of International Law 117
- 4.1 Introduction 117
- 4.2 Post-colonial Generations of Historical Writing about International Law 121
- 4.3 The TWAIL Generation – Moving to the 1990s 126
- 4.4 TWAILing the History of International Law: Peoples, Events, and Concepts 132
- 4.5 The Post-colonial Impact on Knowledge Production Processes 136
- 4.6 Historiographical Debates, Confluences, and Critiques 139
- 4.7 Conclusion 149
- 5 Global Approaches to the History of International Law 152
- 5.1 Introduction 152
- 5.2 From a Eurocentric to a Global History of International Law 155
- 5.3 Globalizing the History of International Law 168
- 5.4 The Globalist Impact on Knowledge Production Processes 173
- 5.5 Historiographical Debates, Confluences, and Critiques 176
- 5.6 Conclusion 180
- 6 Feminist Approaches to the History of International Law 183
- 6.1 Introduction 183
- 6.2 The History of Women in International Law: Neglected, Forgotten, or Lost? 185
- 6.3 Women in International Law and Their Histories until World War I 191
- 6.4 Women in International Law and Their Histories in World War I and the Interwar Years 196
- 6.5 Women in International Law and Their Histories in the Aftermath of World War II and Beyond 208
- 6.6 The Gendering Impact on Knowledge Production Processes 212
- 6.7 Historiographical Debates, Confluences, and Critiques 215
- 6.8 Conclusion 218
- 7 Normative Approaches to the History of International Law 220
- 7.1 Introduction 220
- 7.2 History in International Law: Interpretation, Identification, Application 224
- 7.3 History of International Law: Between Juridical Presentism and Interdisciplinaryization 231

CONTENTS

ix

7.4	International Law in History: Opening Up to External Contexts	243
7.5	Conclusion	249
8	Sociological Approaches to the History of International Law	252
8.1	Introduction	252
8.2	Actors in the Social History of International Law	256
8.3	Sociological Approaches to International Law	268
8.4	The Socio-historical Impact on Knowledge Production Processes	272
8.5	Historiographical Debates, Confluences, and Critiques	277
8.6	Conclusion	280
9	Institutional Approaches to the History of International Law	283
9.1	Introduction	283
9.2	Histories of International Organizations	286
9.3	Historical Institutionalism and the History of International Adjudication	290
9.4	Impact on Knowledge Production Processes	301
9.5	Historiographical Debates, Confluences, and Critiques	303
9.6	Conclusion	305
10	Biographical Approaches to the History of International Law	308
10.1	Introduction	308
10.2	Biography As a Branch of Historiography	310
10.3	The Biographical Turn in the History of International Law	316
10.4	The Biographical Impact on Knowledge Production Processes	327
10.5	Historiographical Debates, Confluences, and Critiques	330
10.6	Conclusion	335
11	Multi-perspectivity and Periodization in the History of International Law	339
11.1	Introduction	339
11.2	A Typology of Periodization in the History of International Law	344
11.3	Empire, Western Universalism, and the Sovereign State	346
11.4	International Theories, Institutions, and Norms	352
11.5	The Postmodern Critique of the Periodization of International Law	359
11.6	A Multi-perspective Approach to Periodization	363

11.7	Fragmentation, Geography, Global Cross-Cultural Interactions, Gender, and Other Unexplored Themes	366
11.8	Conclusion	373
	Bibliography	375
	Index	435

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Every book begins somewhere. This multi-perspective historiographical enquiry into different contemporary modes of doing history in international law began in the ancient city of my ancestors. It was completed thousands and thousands of kilometres away from Seville in the equally millenarian city of Wuhan in China. Between these two geographically distant locations, the research for the book has accompanied me time and again on my travels between and across both Asia and Europe, and occasionally also to North America.

For their invitations during this period (even though, to my regret, I could not honour all of them) and for the time spent together, I am grateful to colleagues at the Pablo de Olavide University in Seville; the Max Planck Institute in Luxembourg; Brunel University London; the Lauterpacht Centre for International Law in Cambridge; Tilburg University; Manchester University International Law Centre; Hamburg University; CEU San Pablo University; the Catholic University of Lille; iCourts at the University of Copenhagen; the European Academy of Yuste; Hainan College of Economics and Business; the Institute for Global Law and Policy at Harvard Law School; the Max Planck Institute for Comparative Law and Public International Law in Heidelberg; the University of British Columbia; the Asian Law Institute at the Law School of the National University of Singapore; Complutense University of Madrid; the China-AALCO Training Program in Beijing; Harvard University Asia Center; the Beijing Institute of Technology; Xiamen University; the China International Import Export Legal Forum in Shanghai; Zhejiang University; Fudan University; EW Barker Centre for Law & Business, Law School of the National University of Singapore; and the Global Human Rights Campus in Venice.

Above all, I want to express my deepest gratitude to the Wuhan Law School and to the Wuhan University Institute of International Law. Its dean, Prof. Feng Guo, its director, Prof. Xiao Yongping, administrative director, Dr Deng Zhaohui, deputy director, Prof. Nie Jianqiang, and my esteemed colleagues Prof. Huang Deming and Prof. Huang Zhixiong, my assistants and students Shi Weimin, Dong Zhao, and Xiao Yang, and many more whom I cannot mention have made me feel extremely welcome in China. I will always be in their debt for their cheerful comradeship: 干杯! I am also grateful to David Kennedy, Philip Alston, Randall Lesaffer, Jorge Viñuales, Anne Peters, David Armitage, Frédéric Mégret, Andrea Bianchi, and Martti Koskeniemi, all of whom I hope may find some consolation in this book for the enduring patience, or lack thereof, they have shown towards my writings over the years. The editorial assistance of David Barnes to help me navigate the modern lingua franca is gratefully acknowledged, as is also Xiao Yang's editorial assistance with referencing and indexing and Dr Fiona Little's at the detailed copy-editing stage. My special thanks also go to two anonymous reviewers of the manuscript proposal for their careful and constructive comments and to a third one for his or her in-effect nihil obstat. Last but not least, I am sincerely appreciative of the work of the general co-editor of this series, Jean d'Aspremont, whose early support and advice were decisive in my embarking on this project. Finally, as always, it is a pleasure to acknowledge the professional support of Tom Randall and Finola O'Sullivan from Cambridge University Press.

Excerpts from my 'The Problem of Periodization in the History of International Law', Law and History Review 37 (2019) can be found in Chapter 11. Excerpts from my 'Concepción Arenal and the place of women in modern international law', Tijdschrift voor Rechtsgeschiedenis 88 (2020) can be found in Chapter 6 and, also, in Chapter 10. Revised excerpts from my 'The turn to the history of international adjudication' in Ignacio de la Rasilla and Jorge E. Viñuales (eds.), Experiments in International Adjudication: Historical Accounts (Cambridge University Press, 2019) can be found in Chapters 1 and 9.

This book was completed during the outbreak of the coronavirus that took the lives of so many and brought untold sorrow first to friends and fellow co-residents of the strong and resilient city of Wuhan and, then, to the world at large. It is dedicated to honour all those who strove together through this challenging period as well as to my wife, Dr Hao Yayezi, and to our daughter, Cristina Rya de la Rasilla Hao, who embodies, in my eyes, the quintessence of the perfect East-meets-West love story.