Contents

List of Maps

Acknowledgments

A Note to the Reader

Introduction

Comparative History of Greece-Rome and China

Roman Late Antiquity and Early Medieval China: Brief Historical Background

Primary Questions and Approaches

Ethnography in the Classical Age

The Greco-Roman Ethnographic Tradition

The Chinese Ethnographic Tradition

Explanatory Paradigms in the Greco-Roman and Chinese Traditions

Conclusions

The Barbarian and Barbarian Antitheses

The Term “Barbarian” and Its Chinese Equivalents

Views of Barbarians in the Greco-Roman Tradition

Views of Barbarian Others in Ancient China

Conclusions

Ethnography in a Post-Classical Age: The Ethnographic Tradition in the Wars and the Jin shu 晉書

Perpetuation of the Barbarian Antithesis

Ethnographic Continuity

Ethnographic Paradigms

Ethnography and the New Barbarians

Conclusions

New Emperors and Ethnographic Clothes: The Representation of Barbarian Rulers

Barbarian Figures in the Wars

Barbarian Figures in the Jin shu 晉書

Conclusions
Contents

5 The Confluence of Ethnographic Discourse and Political Legitimacy: Rhetorical Arguments on the Legitimacy of Barbarian Kingdoms 257
   - Political Legitimacy 258
   - Speeches in Greco-Roman and Chinese Historiography 274
   - Speeches in the Jin shu 277
   - Speeches in the Wars 290
   - Conclusions 308

Conclusion 311

Bibliography 334

Index 359