Is God Invisible?

In this volume, Charles Taliaferro and Jil Evans promote aesthetic personalism by examining three domains of aesthetics – the philosophy of beauty, aesthetic experience, and philosophy of art – through the lens of Judaism, Christianity, Islam, theistic Hinduism, and the all-seeing Compassionate Buddha. These religious traditions assume an inclusive, overarching God’s-eye, or ideal point of view, that can create an emancipatory appreciation of beauty and goodness. This appreciation also recognizes the reality and value of the aesthetic experience of persons and deepens the experience of artworks. Taliaferro and Evans also explore and contrast the invisibility of persons and God. The belief that God or the sacred is invisible does not mean God or the sacred cannot be experienced through visual and other sensory or unique modes. Conversely, the assumption that human persons are thoroughly visible, or observable in all respects, ignores how racism and other forms of bias render persons invisible to others.

This is a series of interdisciplinary texts devoted to major-level courses in religion, philosophy, and related fields. It includes original, current, and wide-spanning contributions by leading scholars from various disciplines that (a) focus on the central academic topics in religion and philosophy, (b) are seminal and up-to-date regarding recent developments in scholarship on the various key topics, and (c) incorporate, with needed precision and depth, the major differing perspectives and backgrounds – the central voices on the major religions and the religious, philosophical, and sociological viewpoints that cover the intellectual landscape today. Cambridge Studies in Religion, Philosophy, and Society is a direct response to this recent and widespread interest and need.

Acknowledgments

We thank Chad Meister and Paul Moser for inviting us to write a book on religion and aesthetics for their series Cambridge Studies in Religion, Philosophy, and Society. Their encouragement and advice have been brilliant. We thank all those who have commented on earlier drafts of this book or engaged in helpful conversations, including Keith Ward, Tim Crane, Fiona Ellis, Tim Mawson, Mario DeCaro, David Macarthur, Paul Reasoner, Katherine Solomonson, Owen Sandercox, Ed Langerak, and the members of the philosophy departments at St. Olaf and Carleton colleges. A special thank-you to Ed and Nancy Polich of Dover Street. We are especially grateful to Kathleen Weilen for her expert editing. Thanks to Mattias Kostov, our research assistant. We are indebted to Bret D. Workman, Mary Bongiovi, Akash Datchinamurthy, Jessica McCurdy Crooks, Zoe Plewa, and G. E. Patterson for preparing the manuscript for publication. Above all, we are grateful for the support and kindness of Beatrice Rehl of Cambridge University Press.

Part of an earlier version of Chapter 2 was presented at Heythrop College, University of London in 2018, and part of Chapter 4 at Harvard University in 2019. Both occasions provided us with insightful feedback. With thanks to Anastasia Faunce, some of Chapter 6 on Venetian painting was presented in our course, “Reflecting Venice,” March 2017, Minnesota Lifelong Learning Center, University of Minnesota.

This book extends the philosophy of imagination, aesthetics, and phenomenology developed in our first coauthored book, The Image in Mind: Theism, Naturalism, and the Imagination, though we do not presuppose the reader has any familiarity with that work. If you find Is God Invisible? An
