Editors' Acknowledgments

We are thankful to all the colleagues, friends, and family who helped make this project successful. Our greatest debt, of course, is to our contributors. The chapters in this book were the subject of a two-day workshop held at Rutgers Law School in Camden, N.J. in October 2019. In addition to our authors, we are grateful to Richard R. W. Brooks, Asaf Raz, and Andrew Tuch, who attended the workshop and offered many helpful comments. Tremendous thanks are due to Carol Shaner, who coordinated the workshop and, as she always does, made us appear more organized than we are.

In preparing the volume, we were greatly aided by three student research assistants, Lauren Bonanno, Ryan Duffy, and Zhao Li, and by Nancy Talley and Genevieve Tung in the law school library.

Many thanks to Matt Gallaway and his excellent team at Cambridge University Press, and to the four anonymous reviewers who offered comments on the project. We thank Arc Indexing for preparing the index.

We are grateful for the enthusiastic support of the Rutgers Center for Corporate Law and Governance, and in particular for the Center's outstanding Advisory Board and Alumni Steering Committee. We thank our colleague, Doug Eakeley, the Center's Co-Director, for his unflagging support of this project and others, and our law school's Co-Deans, Kimberly Mutcherson and David Lopez, for their steady leadership and encouragement. We benefited from sound advice on the project offered by John Oberdiek and Dennis Patterson.

Arthur thanks Tamar Frankel, and remembers B. Sharon Byrd, who spurred interest and inquiry on these issues. Jacob thanks Michael Klausner and Travis Laster, who have greatly shaped his perspective on these subjects.
