Contents

| List of Tables                                      | page xi |
| Foreword                                           | xiii    |
| Theresia Degener                                    | xv      |
| Acknowledgments                                    | xvii    |
| List of Abbreviations                              |         |

Introduction

Challenges and Tensions in Meeting Care and Support Needs 1
A New Framework for Rights-Based Care and Support Policy 5
Scope: Care, Support and Citizenship in Liberal Welfare States 8
Exploring and Addressing Care Policy Tensions in Context: Care and Support Rights in Australian and English Policy 13
My Position as ‘Outsider’ 16
Structure of the Book 18

PART I CARE POLICY TENSIONS: CONFLICTING CLAIMS AND FRAGMENTED SOLUTIONS 21

1 A Feminist Dilemma: Support Unpaid Care or Support Paid Work? 23
1.1 Introduction: Wollstonecraft’s Dilemma and the Care/Work Divide 23
1.2 Advantages and Disadvantages of Support for Women’s Unpaid Caring 25
1.3 Advantages and Disadvantages of Support for Women’s Paid Work Participation 34
1.4 Conclusion 42

vii
Contents

2 The Universal Caregiver Model: Expanding Options or Imposing New Limits?

2.1 Introduction 44

2.2 Features of the Universal Caregiver Model 44

2.3 How Can the Universal Caregiver Model Be Implemented in Care and Support Policy? 47

2.4 Conclusion: Limitations and Theoretical Gaps in Prior Reconciliation Efforts 51

3 Disability Rights and Carers’ Advocacy: To Reject or to Recognize Care?

3.1 Introduction: Is Care a Burden or Is the Concept the Problem? 54

3.2 Advantages and Disadvantages of the Carer Perspective 55

3.3 Advantages and Disadvantages of the Disability Rights Perspective 64

3.4 Conclusion 78

4 A Disability Rights–Informed Ethics of Care: Interdependence and Common Humanity

4.1 Introduction 80

4.2 The Power and Problems of ‘Interdependence’ 80

4.3 Finding Common Ground through Human Rights: Optimism and Hurdles 84

4.4 How Can These Perspectives Be Implemented in Care and Support Policy? 87

4.5 Conclusion: Limitations and Theoretical Gaps in Prior Reconciliation Efforts 92

Part II Balancing Competing Claims through Rights-Based Policy and Law

5 A New Framework for Designing Rights-Based Care and Support Policy

5.1 Introduction 97

5.2 Characterizing Care and Support as Entitlements of Citizenship 98

5.3 Six Principles for Policies to Deliver Care and Support Rights 106

5.4 Conclusion 133
Table of Contents

Part III Care and Support Policy Tensions in Two Liberal Welfare States: Possibilities, Limitations and Options for Reform in Australia and England

6 Income Support for Carers of Children with Disabilities in Australia: Background and Recent Reforms to Carer Payment (Child)
   6.1 Introduction
   6.2 The History of Carers’ Income Support in Australia
   6.3 The 2007–2009 Reform Process
   6.4 Current Eligibility Criteria for Carer Payment (Child)
   6.5 Conclusion

7 Care, Disability and Gender Equality in Australian Carers’ Income Support: Narrow Choices and Unheard Voices
   7.1 Introduction
   7.2 Rigid Roles and Limited Options for Carers
   7.3 The Silence, Dependence and Burden of Children with Disabilities

8 Incorporating Multiple Options and Perspectives: Applying the Care and Support Rights Principles to Carer Payment (Child)
   8.1 Introduction
   8.2 What Would a Rights-Based Policy Look Like? Using the Care and Support Rights Principles to Identify Options for Reform
   8.3 Conclusion: Prevailing Norms and Binaries Must Be Challenged to Secure Care and Support Rights for All

9 Care and Support for Adults in England: Background and the Recent Care Act Reforms
   9.1 Introduction
   9.2 The History of Adult Social Care Policy in England
   9.3 The 2010–2014 Reform Process
   9.4 Assessments, Eligibility and Planning Criteria for Adult Social Care Users and Carers
   9.5 Conclusion

10 Care, Disability and Gender Equality in English Care and Support Policy: Well-Being for All with Resources for a Few?
   10.1 Introduction
   10.2 Some Choices Are Available to Some Carers
   10.3 Interdependence, Choice and Control Are Recognized for Some Users and Carers
Contents

11 Maximizing Options and Opportunities: Aligning the Care Act with the Care and Support Rights Principles
11.1 Introduction
11.2 Could the Care Act Afford Citizenship Rights to Provide and Obtain Care and Support?
11.3 Conclusion: Existing Scaffolding for Rights-Based Policy Should Be Extended and Adequately Resourced

Conclusion
Introduction
A New Approach to Care and Support Policy Is Necessary
Barriers to Rights-Based Reform in Australia and England
The Care and Support Rights Principles Pose a Major Challenge to Prevailing Policies
Care and Support Rights after Neoliberalism?
Conclusion

Index