

THE CAMBRIDGE HISTORY OF
GLOBAL MIGRATIONS

*

VOLUME II

Migrations, 1800–Present

Volume 2 of The Cambridge History of Global Migrations presents an authoritative overview of the various continuities and changes in migration and globalization from the 1800s to the present day. Despite revolutionary changes in communication technologies, the growing accessibility of long-distance travel, and globalization across major economies, the rise of nation-states empowered immigration regulation and bureaucratic capacities for enforcement that curtailed migration. One major theme worldwide across the post-1800 centuries was the differentiation between “skilled” and “unskilled” workers, often considered through a racialized lens; it emerged as the primary divide between greater rights of immigration and citizenship for the former, and confinement to temporary or unauthorized migrant status for the latter. Through thirty-one chapters, this volume further evaluates the long global history of migration; and it shows that despite the increased disciplinary systems, the primacy of migration remains and continues to shape political, economic, and social landscapes around the world.

MARCELO J. BORGES is Professor of History and the Boyd Lee Spahr Chair in the History of the Americas at Dickinson College. He is the author of Chains of Gold: Portuguese Migration to Argentina in Transatlantic Perspective and co-editor (with Linda Reeder and Sonia Cancian) of Emotional Landscapes: Love, Gender, and Migration (2021).

MADÉLINE Y. HSU is Professor of History and Asian American Studies at The University of Texas at Austin. She is the author of The Good Immigrants: How the Yellow Peril Became the Model Minority and co-editor (with Maddalena Marinari and María Cristina García) of A Nation of Immigrants Reconsidered: US Society in an Age of Restriction, 1924–1965.

GLOBAL MIGRATIONS

General Editor
DONNA GABACCIA, Professor Emerita, University of Toronto

Organized into two volumes, The Cambridge History of Global Migrations explores the lives and evaluates the significance of mobile people from 1400 to the present. Typically viewed as a phenomenon synonymous with nineteenth-century globalization, migration was ubiquitous and triggered significant social, economic, technological, and cultural transformations across time. Featuring over sixty essays from experts across the field, together the volumes amplify the stories of foragers and herders, pilgrims and missionaries, merchants, slaves, captives, and prisoners, wealthy and impoverished jobseekers, and refugees fleeing violence, oppression, and environmental change. By evaluating the continuities and changes of migration and globalization, it reveals the long-standing power imbalance between economic elites, imperial and nation-states, and the everyday people who wished to have a say in who can be forced, encouraged, prohibited, or permitted to migrate. Insightful and comprehensive, these volumes uncover the ever-present tensions of movement and immobility, and the various dynamics of globalization.

General Editor Acknowledgments

Donna Gabaccia

General Editor Donna Gabaccia wants to acknowledge that she enjoyed a “dream team” in planning, executing, and submitting this Cambridge History of Global Migrations. She thanks the editorial team composed of Cátia Antunes (who hosted a workshop for the editorial team and some of our contributors in Leiden in June 2019), Marcelo Borges, Madeline Hsu, and Eric Tagliacozzo. She also wishes to thank the many people at Cambridge University Press who made the production of this work a pleasure, at times under difficult conditions. Bethany Thomas originally contacted me about the possibility of developing a global history of migration for the Press, and as we prepared a proposal we were especially fortunate to benefit from a conference discussion of the project with Cambridge Editor Michael Watson. Gabaccia also thanks the five anonymous reviewers who helped the editors to tighten the focus and structure of the work while it was still very much under development. By mid-winter 2020, the editors knew the emerging global pandemic was likely to influence every phase of the plan they had devised for completing the work. Under these difficult circumstances, Gabaccia especially appreciated the always prompt, warm, and level-headed advice received from editor Elizabeth Hanlon and her assistants at the Press, Lisa Carter and Victoria Inci Phillips. And she is sure the entire editorial team joins her in thanking Editorial Assistant James Lacitignola, PhD student at the University of Texas, for his work in coordinating the manuscript preparation and its submission to the Press. Special thanks are owed to content manager Laura Simmons and to the Press’s production team, indexers, and copy-editors.

Volume 2 Acknowledgments

Marcelo J. Borges and Madeline Y. Hsu

The editors of Volume 2 thank General Editor Donna Gabaccia for her leadership and vision in carrying out this ambitious project. We also thank our fellow Volume 1 co-editors, Cátia Antunes and Eric Tagliacozzo, for their helpful suggestions and robust commentary that contributed to the thematic continuities and overall organization of our volumes. We are especially grateful to the contributors who remained committed to completing their chapters, even amid the considerable displacements, inconveniences, and personal losses accompanying a global pandemic. We appreciate their contributions from which we have learned so much. We are grateful for this opportunity to collaborate and thereby learn from each other, expand our intellectual horizons, and enrich our lives. It is commonplace to talk about the value of teamwork, but there is no other way to characterize the generosity, dedication, and comradeship from all involved in this project from our initial conversations in 2017, through the challenges of coordinating during the pandemic, to the realization of our cumulative efforts with this moment when we are sending the manuscript to press.

In summer 2019, we benefited from feedback about the objectives and planned contributions to the Cambridge History of Global Migrations (CHGM) from participants at a two-day workshop at Leiden University, hosted by Cátia Antunes. We thank Cátia and the workshop participants, whose valuable insights were formative in shaping the project.

Madeline Hsu particularly thanks editorial intern James Lacitignola for his enthusiastic engagement with this project and careful management of the plethora of granular details required to compile the final manuscript. She also acknowledges the support of the Mary Helen Thompson Centennial Professorship in the Humanities for partially funding James' position.
