

LACTATION AT WORK

In recent decades, as women entered the US workforce in increasing numbers, they faced the conundrum of how to maintain breastfeeding and hold down full-time jobs. In 2010, the Lactation at Work Law (an amendment to the US Fair Labor Standards Act) mandated accommodations for lactating women. This book examines the federal law and its state-level equivalent in Indiana, drawing on two waves of interviews with human resource personnel, supervising managers, and lactating workers. In many ways, this simple law – requiring break time and privacy for pumping – is a success story. Through advocacy by allies, education of managers, and employee initiative, many organizations created compliant accommodations. This book shows legal scholars how a successful civil rights law creates effective change; helps labor activists and management personnel understand how to approach new accommodations; and enables workers to understand the possibilities for amelioration of workplace problems through internal negotiations and legal reforms.

ELIZABETH A. HOFFMANN is Associate Professor of Sociology and Law & Society at Purdue University. Hoffmann studies how people's legal consciousness and organizational location shape their experience of the law in the workplace. Her research has been supported by the National Science Foundation and has won awards from the Labor and Employment Research Association, the Upjohn Institute for Employment Research, and the American Bar Foundation.

CAMBRIDGE STUDIES IN LAW AND SOCIETY

Founded in 1997, Cambridge Studies in Law and Society is a hub for leading scholarship in socio-legal studies. Located at the intersection of law, the humanities, and the social sciences, it publishes empirically innovative and theoretically sophisticated work on law's manifestations in everyday life: from discourses to practices, and from institutions to cultures. The series editors have longstanding expertise in the interdisciplinary study of law, and welcome contributions that place legal phenomena in national, comparative, or international perspective. Series authors come from a range of disciplines, including anthropology, history, law, literature, political science, and sociology.

Series Editors

Mark Fathi Massoud, University of California, Santa Cruz

Jens Meierhenrich, London School of Economics and Political Science

Rachel E. Stern, University of California, Berkeley

CAMBRIDGE
STUDIES IN LAW AND SOCIETY

LACTATION AT WORK
Expressed Milk, Expressing Beliefs,
and the Expressive Value of Law

Elizabeth A. Hoffmann
Purdue University

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-48854-9 — Lactation at Work
Elizabeth A. Hoffmann
Frontmatter
More Information

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

University Printing House, Cambridge CB2 8BS, United Kingdom
One Liberty Plaza, 20th Floor, New York, NY 10006, USA
477 Williamstown Road, Port Melbourne, VIC 3207, Australia
314–321, 3rd Floor, Plot 3, Splendor Forum, Jasola District Centre,
New Delhi – 110025, India
103 Penang Road, #05–06/07, Visioncrest Commercial, Singapore 238467

Cambridge University Press is part of the University of Cambridge.

It furthers the University's mission by disseminating knowledge in the pursuit of education, learning, and research at the highest international levels of excellence.

www.cambridge.org
Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9781108488549
DOI: 10.1017/9781108770828

© Elizabeth A. Hoffmann 2021

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2021

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library.

ISBN 978-1-108-48854-9 Hardback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-48854-9 — Lactation at Work
Elizabeth A. Hoffmann
Frontmatter
More Information

This book is dedicated to my mom, Milly Hoffmann, who is my constant Ally Already in everything. She nursed me as a child and continues to support me in all my endeavors.

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-48854-9 — Lactation at Work
Elizabeth A. Hoffmann
Frontmatter
More Information

CONTENTS

List of Tables	page viii
Acknowledgments	ix
1 Introduction	1
2 Lactation Law as Public Policy	28
3 Expressed Frustration: Noncompliant, Insufficient, and Inconsistent Accommodations	65
4 Milk and Management: Substantive Compliance through Managerialization	94
5 Allies Already: Supportive Human Resource Specialists and Supervising Managers	119
6 Moralizing the Law: Listening in the Shadow of the Law and the Transformation of Supervising Managers	138
7 Conclusion	169
Appendix A – Federal and State Lactation at Work Laws	203
Appendix B – Methodology and Research Strategy	205
References	211
Index	235

TABLES

1.1 Lactation at work and pathways to social change	17
A.1 Interviewees	206

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Special thanks are due to the many interviewees who participated in this study. This work would not be possible without them. Their voices are this project.

This project received support from several institutions, in addition to the resources given me by my home institution, Purdue University. It was jointly funded by the Innovation and Organizational Sciences Program and the Law and Social Sciences Program National Science Foundation, grant SES-0853534. I am also grateful for the feedback and support I received while a visiting scholar at Department of Management, London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE), and at the Center for the Study of Law and Society (CSLS), the University of California, Berkeley. While at LSE, this project was furthered by the ideas and suggestions of Alexandra Beaugard, Uta Bindl, Jonathan Booth, Richard Hyman, Pat McGovern, and Matt Vidal. While at CSLS, I particularly benefited from the advice and mentorship from KT Albiston, Tom Burke, Lauren Edelman, Bob Kagan, and Rachel Stern.

I would like to thank fellow panelists and participants at the annual meetings, including those of the Law & Society Association, and the American Sociological Association, and the biannual meeting of the Midwest Law & Society Retreat. I would also like to thank the reviewers and editors at Law & Society Review, which published a version of Chapter 5. Certain friends read and discussed various drafts, furthering and refining my analysis, including Jeannine Bell, Lynette Chua, Kathleen Hull, Mark Hurwitz, Val Jenness, Erin Kelly, Anna Kirkland, Ron Levi, George Lovell, Anna-Maria Marshall, and Elizabeth Nisbet. In particular, I would like to thank Howie Erlanger – a mentor since before I even began law school – who read numerous drafts and offered incredible advice and encouragement throughout this project.

Within Purdue University, I am very grateful for the support I received from Sociology department heads Ken Ferraro, Linda Renzulli, and Bert Useem. Many Purdue colleagues helped me develop my ideas and encouraged my work, especially Rosie Clawson, Rachel Einwohner, Scott Feld, Spencer Headworth, Alice Pawley, Carolyn Perrucci, Kevin Stainback, and Jill Sutor. I would like to thank my research assistants, both undergraduate and graduate students, who helped with the literature, interviews, and coding.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I would like to thank Purdue's College of Liberal Arts and Dean Reingold for awarding me an Engage Grant to fund the workshop for this book. The feedback from the book workshop was incredible. I am forever indebted to those brilliant participants: David Engel, Sandy Levitsky, Jeremy Reynolds, Robin Stryker, and Mark Suchman.

Finally, without the encouragement from friends and family, this book could never have developed. I would like to thank my mother, Milly Hoffmann, who has cheered me on throughout my academic career and has always been a source of great love and inspiration. I also would like to thank Mikaila Arthur, Jenny Bellehumeur, Scott Barclay, Elizabeth Boyle, Catherine Capellaro, Jane Collins, Joe Conti, Chuck Epp, Emily Hoffmann-Noll, Mona Lynch, Jenny Moss, LB Nielsen, Robert Noll, Becky Sandefur, Mitra Sharafi, Susan Silbey, David Witzling, Nancy Worcester, and Kathyryne Young. Your advice and support at the various stages of this project made this book possible.