

The Cambridge Companion to the Drum Kit

The drum kit is ubiquitous in global popular music and culture, and modern kit drumming profoundly defined the sound of twentieth-century popular music. The Cambridge Companion to the Drum Kit highlights emerging scholarship on the drum kit, drummers, and key debates related to the instrument and its players.

Interdisciplinary in scope, this volume showcases research from across the humanities, sciences, and social sciences, all of which interrogates the drum kit, a relatively recent historical phenomenon, as a site worthy of analysis, critique, and reflection. Providing readers with an array of perspectives on the social, material, and performative dimensions of the instrument, this book will be a valuable resource for students, drum kit studies scholars, and all those who want a deeper understanding of the drum kit, drummers, and drumming.

MATT BRENNAN is Reader in Popular Music at the University of Glasgow and the author of Kick It: A Social History of the Drum Kit (Oxford University Press). His previous book, When Genres Collide (Bloomsbury), was named as one of Pitchfork's 'Favourite Music Books of 2017'.

JOSEPH MICHAEL PIGNATO, Professor at the State University of New York, Oneonta, is a 'musician, educator, and music business visionary' (Tape Op Magazine). He is co-author of The Music Learning Profiles Project (Routledge) and leader of the acclaimed avant jazz collective Bright Dog Red, which records for Ropeadope Records.

DANIEL AKIRA STADNICKI is a SSHRC Postdoctoral Fellow at McGill University. He has worked as a session drummer for over two decades in the Canadian folk, world, and pop music scenes, garnering Juno nominations, Gold Records, Canadian Folk Music Awards, among other accolades.

Vincent Andrisani, PhD, is an instructor in the School of Journalism and Communication at Carleton University. He writes and lectures on the topics of sound, media, and communication, and his work has appeared in outlets such as Sounding Out! Blog, TEDxSFU, and Tapuya: Latin American Science, Technology, and Society. Before his career as an academic, Andrisani spent several years as a performing musician in the city of Toronto. Although he plays live much less these days, he maintains a healthy regimen of Stone-Killers to keep his hands in shape.

Paul Archibald is a Bristol-based drummer and lecturer in music. Current projects include Rob Heron & the Tea Pad Orchestra and Free Nelson Mandomjazz, currently signed to RareNoise Records. International touring (e.g. Jazzfest Berlin, OctLoft China), local festival exposure (e.g. Glastonbury, Wilderness, Bestival), as well as regular radio play (BBC 2, 3, 4) feed into his teachings on the live music industry. Having previously lectured in the sociology of popular music at the University of Bristol, Archibald lectures on research methods and the popular music industry at the British and Irish Modern Music (BIMM) Institute, Bristol.

Steven Baur is Associate Professor of Music at Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia. He has published widely on topics in nineteenth- and twentieth-century music from both 'popular' and 'classical' traditions, from Ringo to Ravel and from Musorgsky to the mambo. His work appears in the Journal of the American Musicological Society, Popular Music and Society, American Music, and the New Grove Dictionary of American Music, and he has co-edited two books. His current research focuses on drum kit performance practice. Baur is also an accomplished drummer with dozens of recordings and hundreds of live performances to his credit.

adam patrick bell is Associate Professor of Music Education in the School of Creative and Performing Arts at the University of Calgary, Canada. He is the author of Dawn of the DAW: The Studio as Musical Instrument (Oxford University Press) and editor of The Music Technology Cookbook: Ready-Made Recipes for the Classroom (Oxford University Press). bell has written several peer-reviewed articles and chapters on the topics of music technology in music education and disability in music education. Prior to his career in higher education, he worked as an elementary music teacher by day and music producer by night.

Matt Brennan is Reader in Popular Music at the University of Glasgow. He has served as Chair of the UK and Ireland branch of the International Association for the Study of Popular Music (IASPM), and has authored, co-authored, and edited several books in the field of popular music studies. His latest book, Kick It: A Social History of the Drum Kit (Oxford University Press), establishes the drum kit's central role in shaping the history of music over the last 150 years. His previous monograph, When Genres Collide (Bloomsbury), was named as one of Pitchfork's 'Favourite Music Books of 2017' and was awarded the IASPM Canada Book Prize.

Bill Bruford enjoyed a long and fruitful career as a musician and teacher before stepping back out of practice to investigate aspects of creativity and performance psychology. He is an unaffiliated early career scholar, having acquired his doctorate from the University of Surrey, UK (2016). He has given lectures and seminars at multiple European and North American institutions. His academic writing includes journal articles, book reviews, book chapters, and his most recent book, Uncharted: Creativity and the Expert Drummer. Dr Bruford was inducted into the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame as a member of the group Yes in 2017.

Daniel Gohn is a faculty member at the Department of Communication and Arts of the University of Sao Carlos, Brazil. His research interests include the use of technology in music education, popular music, and processes for the teaching and learning of percussion instruments. He is the author of In the World of Drumming (Hudson Music Digital) and other titles published in Portuguese only: Music Education and Distance Learning: Approaches and Experiences (Cortez Editora), Digital Technologies for Music Education (EdUFSCar), Music Self-learning: Technological Alternatives (Annablume), and Yamaha's Percussion Book (Ricordi).

Nat Grant is a multi-skilled artist and researcher: performer, sound artist, and composer working on unceded Wurundjeri country in Melbourne, Australia. Grant has created original music for theatre, dance, film, and live art; holds a PhD in composition from the Victorian College of the Arts; and in 2018 received the Age Music Victoria Award for Best Experimental/Avant-Garde Act. A podcaster and programmer for 3CR community radio, he is interested in the power of sound and music as storytelling tools. A co-curator for the weekly experimental performance series the Make it Up Club, Grant is invested in creating and maintaining community around sound making.

Scott Hanenberg is an instructor of music theory and music technology at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. His research uses corpus analysis and positional listening to study meter and groove in popular music. Hanenberg's recent work has investigated the role of the drum kit in shaping listener interpretations of irregular meters.

Patrick Hernly is Lead Faculty of the Music Industry / Recording Arts program at St Petersburg College, where he teaches drum set and hand percussion, music theory, and critical listening for music production, and directs the Rock and R&B ensembles. He has been an active performer across multiple genres for the past two decades, recording and touring in North America, South America, Europe, and Asia. He earned a master's degree at Indiana University and a PhD in Music Education at the University of South Florida. His research on international music education has been presented in national and international conferences and publications.
