

Irish Women and the Great War

This is the first book-length study of the impact of the Great War on women's everyday lives in Ireland, focussing on the years of the war and its immediate aftermath. Fionnuala Walsh demonstrates how Irish women threw themselves into the war effort, mobilising in various different forms, such as nursing wounded soldiers, preparing hospital supplies and parcels of comforts, undertaking auxiliary military roles in port areas or behind the lines, and producing weapons of war. However, the war's impact was also felt beyond direct mobilisation, affecting women's household management, family relations, standard of living, and work conditions and opportunities. Drawing on extensive research in archives in Ireland and Britain, Walsh brings women's wartime experience out of the historical shadow and examines welfare and domestic life, bereavement, social morality, employment, war service, politicisation and demobilisation to challenge ideas of emancipation and reflect upon the significant impact of the Great War on Irish society.

FIONNUALA WALSH is a lecturer in Modern Irish History at University College Dublin.

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-49120-4 — Irish Women and the Great War
Fionnuala Walsh
Frontmatter
More Information

---

Studies in the Social and Cultural History of Modern Warfare

General Editor

Robert Gerwarth, University College Dublin
Jay Winter, Yale University

Advisory Editors

Heather Jones, University College London
Rana Mitter, University of Oxford
Michelle Moyd, Indiana University Bloomington
Martin Thomas, University of Exeter

In recent years the field of modern history has been enriched by the exploration of two parallel histories. These are the social and cultural history of armed conflict, and the impact of military events on social and cultural history.

Studies in the Social and Cultural History of Modern Warfare presents the fruits of this growing area of research, reflecting both the colonization of military history by cultural historians and the reciprocal interest of military historians in social and cultural history, to the benefit of both. The series offers the latest scholarship in European and non-European events from the 1850s to the present day.

A full list of titles in the series can be found at: www.cambridge.org/modernwarfare

Irish Women and the Great War

---

Fionnuala Walsh
University College Dublin

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-49120-4 — Irish Women and the Great War
Fionnuala Walsh
Frontmatter
More Information

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

University Printing House, Cambridge CB2 8BS, United Kingdom
One Liberty Plaza, 20th Floor, New York, NY 10006, USA
477 Williamstown Road, Port Melbourne, VIC 3207, Australia
314–321, 3rd Floor, Plot 3, Splendor Forum, Jasola District Centre,
New Delhi – 110025, India
79 Anson Road, #06–04/06, Singapore 079906

Cambridge University Press is part of the University of Cambridge.

It furthers the University's mission by disseminating knowledge in the pursuit of education, learning and research at the highest international levels of excellence.

www.cambridge.org
Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9781108491204
DOI: 10.1017/9781108867924

© Fionnuala Walsh 2020

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2020

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Names: Walsh, Fionnuala, 1988– author.

Title: Irish Women and the Great War / Fionnuala Walsh, University College Dublin.

Description: Cambridge, United Kingdom ; New York, NY : Cambridge University Press, 2020. | Series: Studies in the social and cultural history of modern warfare | Includes bibliographical references and index.

Identifiers: LCCN 2019056015 (print) | LCCN 2019056016 (ebook) | ISBN 9781108491204 (hardback) | ISBN 9781108811736 (paperback) | ISBN 9781108867924 (epub)

Subjects: LCSH: World War, 1914–1918–Ireland. | World War, 1914–1918–Women. | Women–Ireland–Social conditions–20th century. | World War, 1914–1918–Social aspects–Ireland. | Ireland–History–1910–1921.

Classification: LCC D547.I6 W348 2020 (print) | LCC D547.I6 (ebook) | DDC 940.3/415082–dc23

LC record available at <https://lcn.loc.gov/2019056015>

LC ebook record available at <https://lcn.loc.gov/2019056016>

ISBN 978-1-108-49120-4 Hardback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

Contents

---

List of Tables	page vi
Acknowledgements	vii
List of Abbreviations	x
Introduction	1
1 Mobilising for the War Effort	21
2 Family, Welfare and Domestic Life	64
3 Social Morality	97
4 Working Lives	125
5 Politicisation	164
6 Demobilisation	194
Conclusion	223
Select Bibliography	231
Index	251

Tables

---

1.1 British Red Cross membership in Ireland and Britain	page 26
1.2 Irish War Hospital Supply Depot productivity, 1916–1917	43
1.3 Previous occupations of sampled WAAC members	47
3.1 Press reports of separation women in the courts in 1915 and 1917	106
4.1 Female membership of specifically Irish trade unions, 1914–1917	155
6.1 Women in Ireland in receipt of out-of-work donation, Dec. 1918 to Feb. 1919	199
6.2 Marriages in Ireland: a comparison between 1911 and 1926	219

Acknowledgements

---

It was ten years ago that I first became interested in Irish women's experience during the Great War. Since then, research into Ireland's Great War has expanded enormously and has been enriched by the public interest generated during the centenary commemorations. It has been a stimulating time to be immersed in this project and to witness women's experiences emerge from the historical shadow. I benefitted greatly from the scholarship and the guidance of pioneers in the field. This book was especially inspired and influenced by the late David Fitzpatrick of Trinity College Dublin. It is with deep gratitude that I remember David's careful guidance, his kindness and generosity, and above all his encouragement. It was a privilege and a pleasure to be supervised by David, and it grieves me that he did not live to see this book published. Nevertheless, I have been fortunate in my mentors, and I wish to especially thank Anne Dolan for her wise counsel and her empathetic support. My initial interest in historical research arose from influential school teachers (Tony Doohan, Margaret Cosgrove, Pat Watson) and lecturers during my undergraduate degree in Maynooth University (R.V. Comerford, Margaret Kelleher, Clare O'Neill, Filipe Ribeiro de Meneses and Marian Lyons), and I remain grateful for their inspiration.

This work was made possible by postgraduate and postdoctoral awards from the Irish Research Council. These were instrumental in enabling me to complete research in a range of archives and libraries in Ireland and the United Kingdom, as well as providing me with essential time to focus on the work. I am greatly indebted to the many librarians and archivists for their expert advice. I would like to particularly note the support of the staff at the OPW-Maynooth University Archive, my former colleagues in the National Library of Ireland and the British Red Cross archivists for granting me access to membership records. I was fortunate to have welcoming hosts for many of my archival trips beyond Dublin, and I especially thank Louise and Kevin (London), Sarah and James (Belfast), and Ciska (Oxford) for their warm hospitality.

viii Acknowledgements

I have presented aspects of this research at many conferences and seminars in Ireland, the United Kingdom and Turkey, and I am grateful to all those who offered feedback or advice. Various individuals generously provided me with source materials in their possession or suggested avenues for further research. In this regard I acknowledge with gratitude Tom Burke, Elaine Callinan, Emma Clarke, Richard Collins, Clara Cullen, Tara Doyle, Liz Goldthorpe, Susan Grayzel, John Horne, Brian Hughes, Jane Leonard, Hubert Mahony, Lucy McDiarmid, Senia Pašeta, Tom Turpin and Ciarán Wallace. I also thank Daniel Purcell for providing his expertise in data analysis and Conor Reidy for his indexing work. It has been a pleasure to work with Cambridge University Press, and I am grateful to the staff for their patience and professionalism, especially Michael Watson and the two anonymous peer reviewers for their invaluable feedback and advice.

I worked on this book in three institutions: Trinity College Dublin, the National Library of Ireland and, latterly, University College Dublin (UCD). In each of these institutions, I have benefitted from the wisdom and support of friends and colleagues. The Department of History in Trinity guided me on my journey from student to scholar, while the Trinity Irish History Seminar and its accompanying Buswells community, led by the ever-encouraging Eunan O’Halpin, provided lasting friendships and aided the development of my research. I was fortunate to be a residential fellow at the Trinity Long Room Hub Arts and Humanities Institute, and I am grateful to the staff and my fellow Hub alumni for creating and sustaining such a collaborative and collegial research environment. My Hub cohort, in particular Jonny, Olivia, Richard, Leah, Sarah, Alex and Ben, have remained an important source of friendship and support in the intervening years, even as we have scattered far and wide. The Irish Committee for Historical Sciences Research Studentship at the National Library of Ireland was a stimulating and reinvigorating sojourn after my PhD. The book was completed in the School of History in UCD and I am deeply grateful to all my colleagues there, especially Catherine Cox, Lindsey Earner Byrne, Jen Keating, Alice Mauger and Lior Tibet. My work has also been enriched by the scholarship and collaboration of my colleagues in the Women’s History Association of Ireland. Many others provided helpful advice and assisted me to find the time and space to write, while my students inspired me with their enthusiasm and passion for history.

I wish to especially thank two former Trinity compatriots, Ellie Payne for her kindness and sage advice over many lunchtime conversations and Conor Morrissey for his invaluable guidance and encouragement in writing this book, from research to publication. The book benefitted greatly from Conor's stringent commentary on the draft text. My friends outside academia have also been an immeasurable support, in particular Colleen, Aisling, Tara and Róisín. I very much appreciate their solidarity and good humour, together with their refusal to let me become subsumed entirely by the demands of historical research. I also thank my aunt, Anne Thurston, for her collegiality and friendship.

My brothers Patrick, Cormac and Fergal shared the accumulated wisdom of their own academic experiences and, together with my sisters-in-law Niamh, Stefanie and Burçin, provided hospitality in London, Hamburg and Istanbul, and more recently Belfast. My beloved nieces and nephews, Caoimhe, Matilda, Robin and Finn, proved most welcome distractions. I am especially beholden to the fellow family historians, Patrick and Niamh, who have been tremendous sources of advice for both academic publishing and navigating the history discipline more broadly, and to both Patrick and my mother for their insightful comments on the full text. The last and greatest debt of all is to my parents, Jim and Jeanne. This book would be much the poorer without their wisdom, inspiration, steadfast encouragement and generosity. I am grateful beyond words for their unwavering belief in my work and, in small recompense, this book is dedicated to them with my love.

Abbreviations

---

AOH	Ancient Order of Hibernians
BLPES	British Library of Political and Economic Science
BMH	Bureau of Military History
BRCA	British Red Cross Archives
BRCS	British Red Cross Society
CCCA	Cork City and County Archives
DATII	Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland
DCA	Dublin City Archives
DDA	Dublin Diocesan Archives
DMP	Dublin Metropolitan Police
ILHS	Irish Labour History Society
IPP	Irish Parliamentary Party
ITGWU	Irish Transport and General Workers Union
ITUC	Irish Trade Union Congress
IWFL	Irish Women's Franchise League
IWHSD	Irish War Hospital Supply Depot
IWM	Imperial War Museum
IWSF	Irishwomen's Suffrage Federation
IWWU	Irish Women Workers' Union
LGB	Local Government Board
LHL	Linen Hall Library
MMMA	Medical Missionaries of Mary Archive
MTI	Municipal Technical Institute, Belfast
NAI	National Archives of Ireland
NFWW	National Federation of Women Workers
NLI	National Library of Ireland
NRF	National Relief Fund
NSPCC	National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children
NUWW	National Union of Women Workers of Great Britain and Ireland
OMARC	OPW-Maynooth Archive and Research Centre

List of Abbreviations

xi

PRONI	Public Record Office of Northern Ireland, Belfast
QAIMNS	Queen Alexandra Imperial Military Nursing Service
QMNG	Queen Mary Needlework Guild
RCBL	Representative Church Body Library
RCPI	Royal College of Physicians Ireland
RDFA	Royal Dublin Fusiliers Association
RFS	Register of Friendly Societies
RIC	Royal Irish Constabulary
SJAA	St John Ambulance Association
SSFA	Soldiers' and Sailors' Families' Association
TCD	Trinity College Dublin
TFNS	Territorial Force Nursing Service
TNA	The National Archives, Kew
UCDA	University College Dublin Archives
UUC	Ulster Unionist Council
UVF	Ulster Volunteer Force
UWUC	Ulster Women's Unionist Council
VAD	Voluntary Aid Detachment
WAAC	Women's Army Auxiliary Corps
WNHA	Women's National Health Association
WO	War Office
WRAF	Women's Royal Air Force
WRNS	Women's Royal Naval Service
WSPU	Women's Social and Political Union
WWS	Women, War and Society collection
YWCA	Young Women's Christian Association

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-49120-4 — Irish Women and the Great War
Fionnuala Walsh
Frontmatter
More Information

---