The years between 1780 and 1830 are vital decades in the history of Irish writing in English. This book charts the confluence of Enlightenment, antiquarian, and romantic energies within Irish literary culture and shows how different writers and genres absorbed, dispersed, and remade those interests during five decades of political change. During those same years, literature made its own history. By the 1840s, Irish writing formed a recognisable body of work, which later generations would draw on, quote, anthologise, and dispute. Questions raised by novels, poems, and plays of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries—the politics of language and voice; the relationship between literature and locality; the possibility of literature as a profession—resonated for many Irish writers over the centuries that followed and continue to matter today. This comprehensive volume will be a key reference for scholars and students of Irish literature and romantic literary studies.

Claire Connolly is Professor of Modern English at University College Cork in Ireland, Fellow of the Learned Society of Wales, and a member of the Royal Irish Academy. Her book A Cultural History of the Irish Novel, 1790–1829 (Cambridge Studies in Romanticism, 2011) won the Donald J. Murphy Prize, awarded by the American Conference for Irish Studies. She has been a visiting Associate Professor of Irish Studies and English at Boston College, the O’Brien Professor at Concordia University in Montreal, and Parnell Fellow in Irish Studies at Magdalene College, University of Cambridge.
IRISH LITERATURE IN TRANSITION

General editors:
Claire Connolly, University College Cork
Marjorie Howes, Boston College

This six-volume series captures the dynamic energies transmitted over more than 300 years of the established literary landmarks that constitute Irish literary life. Ambitious in scope and depth, and accommodating new critical perspectives and approaches, Irish Literature in Transition captures the ongoing changes in the Irish literary canon. Each of the six volumes revises our understanding of established issues and texts and, simultaneously, introduces new questions, approaches, and authors. These volumes address periods of transition, but also periods of epochal upheaval and turning points of real significance. Each one of these books challenges in different ways the dominant approaches to a period of literature by shifting the focus from what happened to understanding how and why it happened. They elucidate the multifaceted interaction between the social and literary fields in the evolution of Irish literature until the present moment. Taken together, Irish Literature in Transition constitutes a new kind of literary history across centuries of intense cultural and literary creation. It offers a comprehensive analysis of the Irish literary experience, creating a new and dynamic version of literary history that highlights the significance of change as a lived, felt force.

Books in the series
1. Irish Literature in Transition, 1700–1780 edited by Moyra Haslett
2. Irish Literature in Transition, 1780–1830 edited by Claire Connolly
3. Irish Literature in Transition, 1830–1880 edited by Matthew Campbell
5. Irish Literature in Transition, 1940–1980 edited by Eve Patten
Contents

- List of Contributors
  page viii
- Series Preface
  xiii
- General Acknowledgements
  xv
- Acknowledgements
  xvi

Introduction: Making Maps: Irish Literature in Transition, 1780–1830

Claire Connolly
1

Part I Origins

1 Gaelic Literature in Transition, 1780–1830
   Lea Ní Mhunghaile
   37

2 Irish Literature and Classical Modes
   Norman Vance
   52

Part II Transitions

3 Irish Literary Theory: From Politeness to Politics
   Julia M. Wright
   69

4 Whigs, Weavers, and Fire-Worshippers: Anglophone Irish Poetry in Transition
   Matthew Campbell
   85

5 Metropolitan Theatre
   David O'Shaughnessy
   107

6 Harps and Pepperpots, Songs and Pianos: Music and Irish Poetry
   Adrian Paterson
   122
Contents

7  Enlightened Ulster, Romantic Ulster: Irish Magazine Culture of the Union Era
    Jennifer Orr
148

PART III REPUTATIONS
171

8  Placing Mary Tighe in Irish Literary History: From Manuscript Culture to Print
    Harriet Kramer Linkin
173

9  Edgeworth and Realism
    James Chandler
188

10 Lady Morgan and ‘the babbling page of history’: Cultural Transition as Performance in the Irish National Tale
    Nicola Lloyd
206

11 ‘The diabolical eloquence of horror’: Maturin’s Wanderings
    Jim Kelly
226

12 English Ireland/Irish Ireland: the Poetry and Translations of J. J. Callanan
    Gregory A. Schirmer
242

13 Thomas Moore and the Social Life of Forms
    Jane Moore
257

14 ‘English, Irished’: Union and Violence in the Fiction of John and Michael Banim
    Willa Murphy
273

15 The Transition of Reputation: Gerald Griffin
    Mark Corcoran
292

16 William Maginn: the Cork Correspondent
    David E. Latané
306

PART IV FUTURES
321

17 ‘My country takes her place among the nations of the earth’: Ireland and the British Archipelago in the Age of the Union
    Murray Pittock
323
Contents

18 Mentalities in Transition: Irish Romanticism in European Context
   Joep Leerssen
   342
19 Ireland and Empire: Popular Fiction in the Wake of the Union
   Sonja Lawrenson
   359
20 Transatlantic Influences and Futures
   Joseph Rezek
   381
21 The Literary Legacies of Irish Romanticism
   Fiona Stafford
   402
Index
   422
Contributors

MATTHEW CAMPBELL is Professor of Modern Literature at the University of York. He is the author of Irish Poetry under the Union, 1801–1924 (2013). He has written and published widely on Irish and English poetry and is editor of Irish Literature in Transition, 1830–1880 for Cambridge University Press.

CLAIRE CONNOLLY is Professor of Modern English at University College Cork. She is a Fellow of the Learned Society of Wales and a Member of the Royal Irish Academy. Her book A Cultural History of the Irish Novel, 1790–1829 (2011) won the Donald J. Murphy Prize, awarded by the American Conference for Irish Studies.

MARK CORCORAN’s PhD research at the National University of Ireland, Galway, focused on nineteenth-century Irish literature. He continues to write on nineteenth- and twentieth-century Irish literature, including the work of George Moore. He is currently editing an essay collection titled Shadowing the Arts: George Moore’s Transnational and Cosmopolitan Networks.

JIM KELLY is a lecturer at the University of Exeter, Cornwall campus. He is the author of Charles Maturin: Authorship, Authenticity and the Nation (2011) and editor of Ireland and Romanticism: Publics, Nations, and
List of Contributors

Scenes of Cultural Production (2011). He has published a number of articles on Irish romanticism and writing in the post-Union period.

Sonja Lawrenson lectures in eighteenth- and nineteenth-century literature at Manchester Metropolitan University. Her research centres on women’s writing in eighteenth-century and romantic Ireland. She has published on authors such as Frances Sheridan, Elizabeth Hamilton, Maria Edgeworth, and Sydney Owenson, and more broadly on romantic orientalism, romantic popular fiction, and the eighteenth-century Irish stage.

Nicola Lloyd is senior lecturer in English literature and digital humanities at Bath Spa University. She has published articles and chapters on the popular novel in the romantic period, the digital image archive and illustrations studies, and Lady Morgan. She is one of the authors of The Palgrave Guide to Gothic Publishing: the Business of Gothic Fiction, 1764–1835 (2017).
List of Contributors

Jane Moore is Reader in English Literature at Cardiff University. Her research focuses on British and Irish romanticism, in particular the works of Thomas Moore. She is the author of Mary Wollstonecraft (1997) and editor of the volume of essays Mary Wollstonecraft (2012), as well as being co-author, with John Strachan, of Key Concepts in Romantic Literature (2010). She also edited the first scholarly edition of The Satires of Thomas Moore (2003).

Willa Murphy is a lecturer in Irish writing in English at the University of Ulster. She has published on cultures of secrecy in nineteenth-century Ireland, on the relationship between literature and religion, and on the theology of Fredrick Hervey. For 2020, she is the Bell Professor of Anglican Studies at the University of Tulsa.

Jennifer Orr lectures in eighteenth-century literature at Newcastle University. She is the author of Literary Networks and Dissenting Print Culture (2015). Her recently published work includes studies of working-class print culture, the poetic circles of Robert Burns, and the Irish poets Samuel Thomson and James Orr.

David O’Shaughnessy is Associate Professor for Eighteenth-Century Studies at the School of English, Trinity College Dublin. He has published widely on William Godwin, including William Godwin and the Theatre (2010). He edited Networks of Aspiration: the London Irish of the Eighteenth-Century, a special issue of Eighteenth-Century Life (2015), and Ireland, Enlightenment and the English Stage, 1740–1820 (2019). He also edited The Letters of Oliver Goldsmith (2018) with Michael Griffin and is currently editing a new eight-volume edition of Goldsmith’s works, also with Griffin, for Cambridge University Press.
List of Contributors

ADRIAN PATE RSON is a lecturer in English at the National University of Ireland, Galway, and has published widely on nineteenth- and twentieth-century literature and writes on the artistic interactions of modernism and the fin-de-siècle. He was the curator of the multimedia exhibition Yeats and the West for Yeats 2015 and is author of Words for Music: W. B. Yeats and Musical Sense (forthcoming).

FIONA STAFFORD is Professor of English Language and Literature at the University of Oxford. She is a Fellow of the British Academy and the Royal Society of Edinburgh. Her books include The Last of the Race (1994); Starting Lines in Scottish, Irish and English Poetry: From Burns to Heaney (2000); Local Attachments (2010); The Long, Long Life of Trees (2016), and The Brief Life of Flowers (2018).
List of Contributors

NORMAN VANCE is Emeritus Professor of English at the University of Sussex. His published work, particularly The Victorians and Ancient Rome (1997) and Irish Literature since 1800 (2002), is mainly literary history. His most recent book is Bible and Novel: Narrative Authority and the Death of God (2013). With Jennifer Wallace, he has edited the fourth volume (1790–1880) of the Oxford History of Classical Reception in English Literature (2015).

Series Preface

Irish Literature in Transition provides a new account of transitions between and across the centuries of Irish literature. Adopting varying frames and scales of reference, the series offers an original map of a territory too often navigated via the narrow channels of political history. Each of the six volumes revises our understanding of established issues and texts and, simultaneously, introduces new questions, approaches, and authors. Together, these books generate alternative genealogies across time and space and help readers to understand and interrogate the ways in which one period reimagines and remakes another.

Discussions of Irish culture have long focused on the close relationship between literature and history. For all the power of such narratives, however, the field has yet to develop a sufficiently dynamic sense of that relationship. Literary transitions do not ‘reflect’ historical change in any simple or straightforward way. Rather, the complex two-way traffic between these realms involves multiple and uneven processes such as distortion, selection, repression, embrace, and critique. The temporal relationships involved in such traffic include simultaneity, time lag, and anticipation.

The six books in this series track patterns of transmission and transformation across Irish culture. More specifically, they ask: what kinds of transitions are registered and provoked by literature and culture? What are the levers and mechanisms of change? How helpful are our current concepts of literary movements, time periods, and national traditions? What is the status of the literary in our literary histories and how do we understand the relations among form, genre, and chronology?

We consider these questions from our own location in a time of scholarly transition. The sheer weight of archival material now available is transforming our sense of both the past and present of Irish literature, while prompting us to produce new kinds of critical narrative. Older literary histories of Ireland are coming under pressure from new modes of reading, such as those attuned to ecocritical issues, affect theory, queer genealogies, questions of scale, and diasporic and transnational geographies. As the concept of the ‘survey’ itself comes under scrutiny in classrooms and universities, these volumes show how authoritative interpretations can be innovative, challenging, and enabling for future readers and writers. Each volume intervenes in continuing critical conversations about culture rather than summarising the field or closing down debate. At the same time, the series charts the contours of literary history across the centuries in ways that highlight the significance of change as a lived, felt force.

Transition: the term means passage from one well-defined period to another; it also helps to track subtle interconnections, contingencies, or modulations; and it will provoke questions about the definition of change itself. In adopting that term, Irish Literature in Transition seeks to provide insight into the future of Irish Studies as it reimagines the literary past and present.

CLAIRE CONNOLLY, University College Cork
MARJORIE HOWES, Boston College
General Acknowledgements

As General Editors of Irish Literature in Transition, we wish to record our thanks to everyone who helped bring this six-volume series to publication. Our fellow editors, Moyra Haslett, Matthew Campbell, Eve Patten, Eric Falci, and Paige Reynolds, have worked tirelessly on books that make significant new contributions to our understanding of Irish literature across time and space. We also record our thanks to the many contributors who helped shape the intellectual identity of this series with their thoughtful and innovative chapters. Dr Ray Ryan of Cambridge University Press prompted us to rise to the challenge of shaping a new narrative of Irish literature in transition. We thank him for that opportunity and for all his insight and support along the way. Thanks also to Edgar Mendez of the Press for his help and hard work in seeing the books through to publication.

The support of the President’s Strategic Fund of University College Cork and the Irish Studies Program at Boston College is gratefully acknowledged here.

CLAIRES CONNOLLY, University College Cork
MARJORIE HOWES, Boston College
GENERAL EDITORS, Irish Literature in Transition
Acknowledgements

My greatest debts are to my Co-General Editor Marjorie Howes, warm host and model of gracious intelligence. For advice, opinions, and all manner of practical help, my sincere thanks to James Chandler, Patricia Coughlan, Alex Davis, Margaret Kelleher, Vera Kreilkamp, Breandán MacSuibhne, Jane Moore, Clíona Ó Gallchoir, Paul O’Donovan, Anna Pilz, Colleen Taylor, Clair Wills, Yen-Chi Wu, and Brandon Yen. Olan O’Donovan’s questions about Isaac Butt were no help at all. And although it is not customary to inscribe dedications in volumes such as this one, I hope it is appropriate to remember Marilyn Butler (1937–2014), brilliant maker of new maps as well as kindly guide to the territory.

CLAIRED CONNOLLY, FLSW MRIA
UNIVERSITY COLLEGE CORK

xvi