

CHRISTIANITY AND MARKET REGULATION

Historically, the Christian tradition has played an influential role in Western economic thought concerning the regulation of markets, but, with the fracturing of the Christian tradition following the Reformation, the decline of Christian influence in academia, and the increasing specialization of economic analysis, that influence has become increasingly opaque. This volume brings together an interdisciplinary team of prominent academic experts on market regulation from four different continents and various faith traditions to reconsider the impact of Christianity on market regulation. Drawing on law, economics, history, theology, philosophy, and political theory, the authors consider both general questions of market regulation and particular regulatory fields such as bankruptcy, corporate law, and antitrust from a Christian perspective.

DANIEL A. CRANE is the Frederick Paul Furth, Sr. Professor of Law at the University of Michigan and counsel at Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison LLP. His scholarship focuses primarily on antitrust and economic history. He is the author of many books and articles on antitrust and competition policy, including The Institutional Structure of Antitrust Enforcement (2011).

SAMUEL GREGG is Research Director at the Acton Institute. He is the author of many books including Reason, Faith, and the Struggle of Western Civilization (2019), For God and Profit: How Banking and Finance Serve the Common Good (2016), Becoming Europe (2013), and Wilhelm Röpke's Political Economy (2010). He is a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society.
