

The Art of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry

In labor is the bee your master,
In skillfulness the earthworm has your teacher grown,
Your knowledge you do share with spirit minds far vaster,
'Tis Art, O Man, you have alone!

The land which knowledge does reside in
You reached through beauty's morning gate.
Its higher gleam to now abide in,
The mind on charms must concentrate.

(Friedrich Schiller 1789, trans. Marianna Wertz)

Acknowledgements

For many indispensable pieces of advice over the years, and for showing us some of their Art, we are very grateful to the following colleagues and friends in the UK: Steve Baker, Mattia Beggi, Frank Besag, Mark Carter, George Chan, Elaine Clark, Richard Day, Adriana Fernandez-Chirre, David Foreman, Jaya Gupta, Sally Hulin, Fungie Johnson, Laurence Leaver, Lexie Lloyd, Louis Marson, Angels Mayordomo, Damian McCann, Michelle Moore, Mark Nathan, Juliet Pierce, Yath Ramesh, Elizabeth Robertson, Stephen Scott, Raj Sekaran, Myriam Senez, Rehana Shakir, Pushpika Singappuli, Zubaida Soomro, Irene Tagg, Amina Tareen, David C Taylor, Eric Taylor, Jeremy Turk, Stephanie Vergnaud, Cathy Wainhouse, Bethanne Willingham, Richard Yarwood, Leora Zehavi, and Merav Zini.

We have learned precious lessons from international colleagues, some of them sadly passed away. Many thanks to Mark Dadds and Dave Coghill in Australia. In Thailand sincere thanks to Chanvit Pornoppadol, Pramote Sukanich, Manas Soongpravit, Anthony Chollapat Chaturongkul, and Sakulrat Srirojana; in Mauritius to Jagjivan Purmessur and Vedanaygum Veeramootoo; in Norway to Simon Wilkinson and Terje Sagvolden; in Germany to Aribert Rothenberger and Tobias Banachewski; and in Sri Lanka to Swarna

Wijetunge and Rasitha Perera. In the USA, thanks to Leon Eisenberg, Jim Swanson, and Sundav Ramaswami. Many thanks also to Joe Sergeant in the Netherlands, and to Luis Rohde from Brazil. Special thanks to Chung-Chi Chan from China.

Several colleagues have given generously of their time to check all or parts of the book. Tomasz Pierscioneck, Steve Baker, and Helen Tanyan showed great kindness, patience, and good humour in this, improving both our reasoning and our wording. Tina Limbu kindly gave very valuable suggestions. Richard Day was our sensitivity adviser, working with great skill and subtlety to improve the content and our choice of words. Many thanks also to all our students and trainees and patients and their families over the years, who have taught us how to explain these ideas. In particular, the graduate students of the Royal Holloway College and University College London have improved our thinking on countless matters, over nearly three decades.

Throughout the years of writing this book we have appreciated the tolerance and support of our wives and families. They have been truly extraordinary, and we are now trying to persuade Chung and Christine to write a book on The Art of Marriage.
