

Instrumental Music in Late Eighteenth-Century Naples

The music of early modern Naples and its renowned artistic traditions remain a fruitful area for scholars in eighteenth-century studies. Contemporary social, political, and artistic conditions had stimulated a significant growth of music, musicians, and culture in the Kingdom of Naples from the beginning of the seventeenth century. Although eighteenth-century Neapolitan opera is well documented in scholarship, historians have paid much less attention to the simultaneous cultivation of instrumental genres. Yet the culture of instrumental music grew steadily and by its end, became an exclusive area of focus for the royal court, a remarkable departure from past norms of patronage. By bridging this gap, Anthony R. DelDonna brings together diverse fields, including historical musicology, music theory, Neapolitan and European history. His book investigates the wide-ranging role of instrumental genres within late eighteenth-century Neapolitan culture and introduces readers to new material, including recently discovered instrumental works of Paisiello, Cimarosa and Pleyel.

ANTHONY R. DELDONNA, Ph.D. is Professor of Musicology and Director of the Music Program at Georgetown University, Washington DC. His research focuses on stage drama, instrumental music, archival studies, and ballet in early modern Italy and appears in The Journal of Musicology, Acta Musicologica, Quaderni d'Italianistica, Eighteenth-Century Studies, Early Music, Eighteenth-Century Music, Recercare, and Studi musicali. DelDonna is the author of the monograph Opera, Theatrical Culture and Society in Late Eighteenth-Century Naples (2012) and co-editor of The Cambridge Companion to Eighteenth-Century Opera with Pierpaolo Polzonetti (2009).

Acknowledgments

My interest in the present project stems from related research on early modern Naples and enduring, unresolved questions about the history of instrumental music in the capital city. It took flight several years ago through discussions with colleagues in Naples and an interest in emerging research about the pedagogical methodologies of the Neapolitan conservatories. Through these conversations, research time in Naples, and continued investigation, the focus turned to the end of the eighteenth century, the so-called Golden Age of the city. In particular, I was intrigued by the question of how the larger attendant culture of Naples and direct patronage of the Neapolitan court, above all that of Maria Carolina, spurred the cultivation and performance of instrumental music. Although there remains more work to be completed, this monograph illuminates a thriving sector of instrumental music in an artistic capital primarily known for its theatrical culture.

There are many individuals and institutions to thank for the realization of this project. I am grateful for the shared expertise of colleagues in Naples, specifically Paologiovanni Maione, Francesca Seller, Francesco Cotticelli, Antonio Carocchia, Lucio Tufano, Francesco Nocerino, Renata Cataldi, and Pasquale Scialò, among others. I am especially grateful to my colleague Cesare Corsi, Director of the Conservatory Library (San Pietro a Majella), for his generous assistance, help in finding materials, and suggestions regarding the content. I would also like to thank Dott.ssa. Nunzia Campobasso, a volunteer in the library, for her support and warm personality. Beyond Naples, the residency of my colleagues Giorgio Sanguinetti and Teresa Gialdrone at Georgetown University in 2017 deepened my practical understanding of partimento, its sources, and its circulation. Rosa Cafiero has also been an unparalleled source of assistance, given her broad knowledge of and publications on early modern Naples.

Colleagues in the United States have similarly contributed to the realization of this project. My collaborator Pierpaolo Polzonetti devoted his time and energy to share his considerable talents and his insights into the manuscript. Guido Olivieri and John Rice encouraged this project from the start and generously shared their expertise; Guido, in particular, has been a significant aide in the conception and focus of this monograph. Robert Gjerdingen patiently read and provided thorough feedback on the theoretical materials and partimento analysis, sharing his considerable expertise. Mark Janello carefully checked my musical examples and provided his insights on the content. Michael Robinson graciously shared materials and answered all of my queries. Georgetown University provided significant support in the form of a Senior Faculty Fellowship and a Competitive Grant in Aid. My colleagues in the Department of Performing Arts and in the College remained supportive throughout this work; they include Soyica Colbert, Anna Celenza, Bryan McCann, Tommaso Astarita, Frederick Binkholder, Ben Harbert, Gianni Cicali, John Pfordresher, Billy Jack, and many others. I am also indebted to our resident early music ensemble Modern Musick (Risa Browder, John Moran, Leslie Nero, Annie Loud, and Dongsok Shin) for their continued collaboration and willingness to program the instrumental repertoire of Naples. My research assistant, James Khoury, provided vital support regarding contemporary periodicals and a range of related issues.

My family and friends have been an inexhaustible source of support in the arduous processes of travel, research, and writing. In Naples, my cousin Pasquale Casillo, his wife, Loredana Vacca, and their son, Lorenzo, welcomed my visits with love and filled my evenings with excellent food, conversation, canzone, and much laughter. I am also grateful to my cousin Cristian Casillo, his wife, Rossella Mosca, and their daughter, Mariavittoria, for their love and patience. This project endured the passing of two beloved family members (Lidia Casillo and Vincenzo Tomei) whose absence weighs on all of us. I am also grateful to my friends the Incarnato family (Arturo, Maria, Gaetano, and Paolo), Edo Restino, and Salvatore Argenio. In the United States, my family and friends Michael and Marianne Hardee, Dr. Eric Cheng, Louis Cona, John and Donna Romito, and James Topilow, MD, provided continuous encouragement.

Finally, I dedicate this book to my wife, Tina, and our daughter, Alessandra. Your enduring love, patience, and understanding make each day together a blessing.
