

Contents

Preface	page ix
1 New Migration Justice Challenges and How to Solve Them: An Overview I
1 Introduction I
2 Some Core Issues This Work Aims to Tackle 2
3 An Overview of the Chapter Contents 4
2 Migration, Justice, and Territory: Toward a Justificatory Framework I4
1 Introduction I4
2 Migration and History: A Brief Account of Some Seminal Issues I5
3 The Important Role of Needs and Location in an Account of Justice 2I
4 Can Conventional Arrangements Be Justified? A Few Cheers for Administrative Structures 26
5 Conclusions 3I
3 Self-Determination, Legitimacy, and the State System: A Normative Framework 33
1 Introduction 33
2 In Search of a Justification for States' Rights to Self-Determination within the State System 34
3 Three Layers of Legitimacy Constraints 37
4 Some Fellow Travelers 40
5 Charles Beitz's Account of Human Rights 42
6 Meeting the Legitimacy Conditions 52
7 Some Problems 59
8 Conclusions 62
4 Muslim Bans 64
1 Introduction 64
2 Some Background 66
3 Some Philosophical Context and a Challenge 74

vi	Contents
4	What Is Wrong with Muslim Bans? Let Me Count Some of the Ways	76
5	Conclusions	86
5	Irregular Migration	88
1	Introduction	88
2	Five Different Cases	90
3	The Passage of Time and Why It Matters	98
4	Why Would It Be Wrong Not to Regularize Status after a Period of Time?	101
5	Are There Strong Countervailing Reasons to Block My Argument Concerning the Obligation to Regularize?	107
6	Conclusions	109
6	Refugees	111
1	Introduction	111
2	Dysfunction in the Refugee System: Ways to Do Better	115
3	Two Cases: Uganda and Jordan	117
4	Lessons from Jordan and Uganda and the Importance of Preparing for Post-Conflict Recovery	119
5	Rethinking Refugee Governance and Responsibilities	122
6	Further Support for and Key Challenges to a Development-Focused Approach	124
7	Taking Stock: Important Qualifications and Opportunities	130
8	Corrective Mechanisms, Legitimacy, and Refugees	132
9	Conclusions	135
7	Temporary Labor Migration	138
1	Introduction	138
2	What's New?	142
3	Reasons to Be Concerned about Temporary Worker Programs: Not So New Concerns	145
4	The Numbers versus Human Rights Issue	148
5	Some Policy Solutions	149
6	Toward Fair Temporary Migration Programs	156
7	Conclusions	164
8	Terrorism and Migration	166
1	Introduction	166
2	How Safe Are We?	168
3	Is Overreacting to the Threat of Terrorism a Further Danger?	171
4	Making Good Decisions about Public Funding: Is a Sensible Conversation on Combating Terrorism Possible?	174
5	The Difficulties of Risk Communication, Irrational Fear, and the Social Construction of Danger	177
6	Why Are People So Afraid?	179

	Contents	vii
7	Synthesizing Discussion: Core Questions for Sensible Policy on Terrorism and Its Relation to Migration	185
8	Conclusions	187
9	Migration in a Legitimate State System: Problems, Progress, and Prospects	190
1	Introduction	190
2	State Responsibilities to Support Fair Arrangements for Migrants	192
3	Some Key Objections	194
4	The Global Compact for Safe, Orderly, and Regular Migration	196
5	Fair Processes for Determining Migrants' Rights	202
6	Self-Determination	215
7	Citizens' Obligations	218
8	Addressing the Objections	222
9	Conclusions	226
	Bibliography	229
	Index	243