

COUNSEL AND COMMAND IN EARLY MODERN ENGLISH THOUGHT

While it has often been recognised that counsel formed an essential part of political discourse in early modern England, the precise role that it occupied in the development of political thinking has remained obscure. This comprehensive and rigorous study of early modern English political counsel establishes the importance of the relationship between political counsel and the discourse of sovereignty. Tracing the changes and evolution of writings on political counsel during the ‘monarchy of counsel’, from the end of the Wars of the Roses to the end of the English Civil War, Joanne Paul examines English thought in its domestic and transnational context, providing an original account of the relationship between counsel and emerging conceptions of sovereignty. Formed at the conjunction of the history of political thought and English political history, this book grounds textual analysis within the context of court politics, intellectual and patronage networks and diplomacy.

JOANNE PAUL is Senior Lecturer in Early Modern History at the University of Sussex where her research currently focuses on Thomas More’s Utopia, as well as the Dudley family during the reign of the Tudors. Winner of the 2014 Sir John Neale Prize for Tudor History, she is a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society. She is the author of Thomas More (2016), and numerous articles in journals such as Renaissance Quarterly, Renaissance Studies and Hobbes Studies.

IDEAS IN CONTEXT

Edited by David Armitage, Richard Bourke, Jennifer Pitts and John Robertson

The books in this series will discuss the emergence of intellectual traditions and of related new disciplines. The procedures, aims and vocabularies that were generated will be set in the context of the alternatives available within the contemporary frameworks of ideas and institutions. Through detailed studies of the evolution of such traditions, and their modification by different audiences, it is hoped that a new picture will form of the development of ideas in their concrete contexts. By this means, artificial distinctions between the history of philosophy, of the various sciences, of society and politics, and of literature may be seen to dissolve.

The series is published with the support of the Exxon Foundation.

A list of books in the series can be found at the end of the volume.

COUNSEL AND COMMAND
IN EARLY MODERN ENGLISH THOUGHT

JOANNE PAUL

University of Sussex

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press & Assessment
978-1-108-74825-4 — Counsel and Command in Early Modern English Thought
Joanne Paul
Frontmatter
More Information

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

University Printing House, Cambridge CB2 8BS, United Kingdom
One Liberty Plaza, 20th Floor, New York, NY 10006, USA
477 Williamstown Road, Port Melbourne, VIC 3207, Australia
314-321, 3rd Floor, Plot 3, Splendor Forum, Jasola District Centre, New Delhi - 110025, India
103 Penang Road, #05-06/07, Visioncrest Commercial, Singapore 238467

Cambridge University Press is part of the University of Cambridge.
It furthers the University's mission by disseminating knowledge in the pursuit of education, learning and research at the highest international levels of excellence.

www.cambridge.org
Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9781108748254
DOI: 10.1017/9781108780407

© Joanne Paul 2020

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2020
First paperback edition 2022

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication data

NAMES: Paul, Joanne, author.

TITLE: Counsel and command in early modern English thought / Joanne Paul.

DESCRIPTION: Cambridge, United Kingdom ; New York, NY : Cambridge University Press,
2020. | Series: Ideas in context | Includes bibliographical references.

IDENTIFIERS: LCCN 2019031565 (print) | LCCN 2019031566 (ebook) | ISBN 9781108490177
(hardback) | ISBN 9781108780407 (epub)

SUBJECTS: LCSH: Political consultants – Great Britain – History. | Prerogative, Royal – Great
Britain – History. | Legitimacy of governments – Great Britain – History. | Great Britain –
History – Tudors, 1485–1603. | Great Britain – History – Stuarts, 1603–1714. | Great Britain –
Politics and government – 1485–1603. | Great Britain – Politics and government – 1603–1714.

CLASSIFICATION: LCC DA300 .P34 2020 (print) | LCC DA300 (ebook) | DDC 320.01/1–dc23

LC record available at <https://lccn.loc.gov/2019031565>

LC ebook record available at <https://lccn.loc.gov/2019031566>

ISBN 978-1-108-49017-7 Hardback

ISBN 978-1-108-74825-4 Paperback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication, and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

Contents

Acknowledgements	page vii
Introduction	I
PART I	13
1 The Humanist Counsellor	15
i Erasmus and the ‘seeds of morality’	16
ii More and ‘uprooting’ Vice	27
iii Castiglione and the ‘veile of ignorance’	34
2 The Right-Timing of Counsel	41
i Starkey and Tarrying Time	42
ii Elyot and Prudent Counsel	48
iii Elyot and Freeing Speech	53
PART II	69
3 Machiavellian Counsel	71
i Machiavelli’s Prince	72
ii Machiavelli in England	84
iii The Machiavellian Counsellor	88
4 Political Prudence	97
i Anti-Machiavellian Machiavellians	97
ii Lipsius and Prudence	104
iii The Essayists and Political Counsel	110
5 Late Tudor Counsellors	122
i Weak Monarchs	123
ii Tyrannous Counsellors	130
iii The Counsel of the Dead	136

vi	Contents
PART III		145
6	Reason of State and the Counsellor	147
	i Botero and Reason of State	148
	ii Interests	153
	iii Travel and Observation	160
7	Counsel, Command and the Stuarts	173
	i Sovereignty and Parliament	175
	ii Most Secret Instructions	180
	iii Civil War	188
	iv Hobbes and the End of Counsel	203
	Bibliography	217
	Manuscript Sources	217
	Primary Sources	217
	Secondary Sources	224
	Index	241

Acknowledgements

As this project emerged out of my PhD, and has been at least ten years in the making, there is a long list of people to whom I owe a debt of gratitude. In order to avoid, however, producing an acknowledgement section as long as the book itself, I will try to confine my thanks here to those who had a direct role in this iteration, which is markedly different to the content of my PhD work.

I must begin my thanks here as I did in my PhD, with Quentin Skinner, who did not cease his support and mentorship when my PhD ended but has continued to champion my work in the intervening years. Likewise, thanks are owed to James Tully, who continues to inspire, unswervingly challenging me to retain a sense of contemporary relevance to my historical work through his example. Comparable inspiration and support have been drawn from other stellar academics, historians and writers I am blessed to call friends, exemplars and mentors, including, but not limited to, David Armitage, Teresa Bejan, Adrian Blau, Richard Bourke, Matthew Champion, David Colclough, Jeffrey Collins, Hannah Dawson, Lindsey Fitzharris, Catherine Fletcher, Andrew Hadfield, Eva Johanna Holmberg, Courtney Herber, Susan James, Kristine Johanson, Carole Levin, Sarah Lewis, Shiru Lim, Vanessa Lim, Suzannah Lipscomb, Kate Maltby, Helen Matheson-Pollock, Kurosh Meshkat, Edmund Neill, Julia Nicholls, Estelle Paranque, Rebecca Rideal, Kirsty Rolfe, Lorenzo Sabbadini, Sophie Smith and Sarah Wilford. I am also extremely grateful to my PhD examiners, Stephen Alford and Angus Gowland, not least for letting me pass, but also for spending so much time in my viva on the topic of revisions and publication, essential to the production of this book.

This group of expert counsellors (if I may) played no small part in helping me secure my position at the University of Sussex, where I've had the benefit of working with yet more generous people, who have supported my work in a plethora of ways. I must begin with Iain McDaniel, who has been an unfailing friend and support in every aspect of my academic life since my application to Sussex and my comrade in intellectual history since arriving there. Thanks as well to the rest of my amazing colleagues, and especially to Hester Barron, Liz James, Laura Kounine, Claire Langhamer, Melissa Milewski and Lucy Robinson, who have all been there in moments when I needed someone to pick me up, brush me off and send me back out into the fight.

Pep talks, coaching and general propping-up were also frequently provided by my dear friends, caring family and, at times, my cat, who deserves a mention in these acknowledgements for putting up with my weird work habits as much as anyone else. I am grateful to rely for such patience, alongside a great deal of encouragement and support, on the wonderful James Darrall, who likewise has to live with me and has been putting up with this book since the beginning, when I followed through on the threat to bring it with me on our first holiday together.

Liz Friend-Smith at Cambridge University Press has been working with me on this book for longer than it's healthy to remember, for which I am very appreciative. I am grateful as well to the anonymous readers, especially to the very helpful reader who graciously agreed to go through the manuscript (at one point well over 150,000 words long) twice. I owe a great debt to several institutions, most especially Queen Mary, University of London, who supported my doctoral research in every way conceivable, and University of Sussex, who have supported me in turning it into a book. Thanks are also due to the British Library, National Archives, Institute for Historical Research and Senate House, London for having everything I could possibly need to produce what you read here, including deeply warming cups of tea.

My final thanks are to those who took time out of their overloaded schedules in recent years to read selections of what follows and provided feedback: Adrian Blau, Virginia Cox, Andrew Hadfield, Vanessa Lim, David Mitchell, Arthur Walzer and Samuel Garrett Zeitlin, as well as the members of the Early Career Writing Group at Sussex History. Academia is (and needs to be) a collaborative exercise, and these readers, alongside all the wonderful people who have supported me in a myriad of other ways, embody this spirit through their exemplary generosity. Thank you.