

FIGHTING TERROR AFTER NAPOLEON

After Napoleon's defeat in 1815, following twenty-six years of unprecedented revolutionary upheavals and endless fighting, the victorious powers craved stability. With the threat of war and revolutionary terror still looming large, the coalition launched an unprecedented experiment to re-establish European security. With over a million troops remaining in France, they established the Allied Council to mitigate the threat of war and terror and to design and consolidate a system of deterrence. The Council transformed the existing norm of interstate relations into the first modern system of collective security in Europe. Drawing on the records of the Council and the correspondence of key figures such as Metternich, Castlereagh, Wellington and Alexander I, Beatrice de Graaf tells the story of Europe's transition from concluding a war to consolidating a new order. She reveals how, long before commercial interest and economic considerations on scale and productivity dictated and inspired the project of European integration, the common denominator behind this first impulse for a unification of Europe in norms and institutions was the collective fight against terror.

BEATRICE DE GRAAF is Distinguished Professor and holds the Chair of History of International Relations at Utrecht University. She was awarded the Stevin Prize in 2018, the highest distinction in Dutch academia. Tegen de terreur, the Dutch version of this book, was listed for the Libris Prize.

FIGHTING TERROR AFTER NAPOLEON

How Europe Became Secure after 1815

BEATRICE DE GRAAF

Utrecht University, The Netherlands

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press & Assessment
 978-1-108-81620-5 — Fighting Terror after Napoleon
 Beatrice de Graaf
 Frontmatter
More Information

CAMBRIDGE
 UNIVERSITY PRESS

Shaftesbury Road, Cambridge CB2 8EA, United Kingdom

One Liberty Plaza, 20th Floor, New York, NY 10006, USA

477 Williamstown Road, Port Melbourne, VIC 3207, Australia

314–321, 3rd Floor, Plot 3, Splendor Forum, Jasola District Centre, New Delhi – 110025, India

103 Penang Road, #05–06/07, Visioncrest Commercial, Singapore 238467

Cambridge University Press is part of Cambridge University Press & Assessment, a department of the University of Cambridge.

We share the University's mission to contribute to society through the pursuit of education, learning and research at the highest international levels of excellence.

www.cambridge.org

Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9781108816205

DOI: 10.1017/9781108895873

© Beatrice de Graaf 2020

This is a translated and updated publication of Tegen de terreur: Hoe Europa veilig werd na Napoleon, written in Dutch by Beatrice de Graaf and published by Prometheus in 2018 (ISBN 9789035144583)

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press & Assessment.

First published in English by Cambridge University Press & Assessment 2020

First paperback edition 2025

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication data

Names: Graaf, Beatrice de, author.

Title: Fighting terror after Napoleon : how Europe became secure after 1815 / Beatrice de Graaf, Universiteit Utrecht, Netherlands.

Other titles: How Europe became secure after 1815

Description: Cambridge ; New York : Cambridge University Press, [2020] | Includes bibliographical references and index.

Identifiers: LCCN 2020027278 (print) | LCCN 2020027279 (ebook) | ISBN 9781108842068 (hardback) |
 ISBN 9781108895873 (ebook)

Subjects: LCSH: Europe – History – 1815–1848. | Napoleonic Wars, 1800–1815 – Peace. | Allied Council of Ministers – History. | Terrorism – Prevention – Europe – History – 19th century. | Internal security –
 Europe – History – 19th century. | National security – Europe – History – 19th century. | Europe –
 Foreign relations – 19th century.

Classification: LCC D383 .G675 2020 (print) | LCC D383 (ebook) | DDC 940.2/82–dc23

LC record available at <https://lccn.loc.gov/2020027278>

LC ebook record available at <https://lccn.loc.gov/2020027279>

ISBN 978-1-108-84206-8 Hardback

ISBN 978-1-108-81620-5 Paperback

Cambridge University Press & Assessment has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

CONTENTS

List of Figures	page vi
List of Maps	ix
List of Tables	x
Acknowledgements	xi
Prologue	1
1 Introduction: Napoleon's Frustration	8
2 Providence in Paris	38
3 Balancing in a Climate of Distress	93
4 'A Moderate Occupation'	138
5 Fausse nouvelles and 'Blacklists': The Allied Struggle against 'Armed Jacobinism'	205
6 Fighting terroristes Together: Towards a 'European Police Directorate'?	258
7 The Price of Security	302
8 Fortress Europe: Constructing the 'Wellington Barrier'	357
9 Beyond Europe	427
10 Conclusion	444
Bibliography	459
Index	492

FIGURES

0.1	Louisa Adams (Mrs John Quincy Adams), 1852. (Universal History Archive/ UIG/ Bridgeman Images)	page 2
1.1	The Allied entry into Paris, 31 March 1814. By Thomas Sutherland, 1815. (Heritage Images)	10
1.2	Arthur Wellesley, Duke of Wellington. Portrait by Thomas Lawrence, 1815/16. (Apsley House, London/ Heritage Images)	13
1.3	Meeting between Blücher and Wellington after the Battle of Waterloo, 1815. By Reinier Vinkeles, 1815/16. This image illustrates the so-called 'horseback diplomacy'. (Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam)	14
2.1	Karl von Müffling, Prussian general. By F. J. L. Sebbers, before 1837. (© SLUB / Deutsche Fotothek / Rapp, Günter)	39
2.2	Klemens von Metternich, Chancellor of Austria. Portrait by Thomas Lawrence, c.1816. (Royal Collection Trust / © Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II 2019)	41
2.3	Tsar Alexander I of Russia. Portrait by Thomas Lawrence, c.1814–18. (Royal Collection Trust / © Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II 2019)	45
2.4	The Russian army, under the command of Tsar Alexander, rides into Paris, 1814. Artist unknown, 1815. (Niday Picture Library / Alamy)	60
2.5	(a) 'The Congress dissolved before the cake was cut up', cartoon about the return of Napoleon. By George Cruikshank, 1815. (b) Detail showing a card entitled 'A Plan for the Security of Europe', which is trampled on by Napoleon. (© The Trustees of the British Museum)	73
2.6	The Battle of Waterloo . To the left lies the Dutch Crown Prince, the later King Willem II, wounded on a stretcher. In the centre stands the Duke of Wellington. Painting by J. W. Pieneman, 1824. (Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam)	84

LIST OF FIGURES

vii

3.1	Picture of a balance, Encyclopaedia Britannica , 4th ed., addition after 1815. Source location: Cambridge University Library. (Photo owned by the author)	106
4.1	Encampment of the British army in the Bois de Boulogne, Paris, 1815. By Matthew Dubourg, 1817. (Heritage Images)	139
4.2	Letter of Blücher, with the order to blow up the Pont d'Iéna, 9 July 1815. (GStA, IV. HA, Rep 15 A, No. 64)	151
4.3	Armand du Plessis, Duke of Richelieu, prime minister of France. Portrait by Thomas Lawrence, 1818. (Royal Collection Trust / © Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II 2019)	178
4.4	Allegory of the return of the paintings of Rubens to Antwerp, 1815. The triumvirate, the heroes of Waterloo, sit on a cloud: the Prince of Orange, Blücher and Wellington. By A. G. van Prooijen, after J. J. Verellen, 1821. (Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam)	186
4.5	Napoleon as Mars the Peacemaker . Statue by Antonio Canova in Apsley House, London. (Heritage Images)	188
4.6	'France in the hands of the allies'. Anonymous cartoon, after George Cruikshank, 1815. (Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam)	189
5.1	Hortense de Beauharnais, queen of Holland. Portrait by A.-L. Girodet-Trioson, c.1805–9. (Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam)	206
5.2	Justus (von) Gruner, in charge of the Allied secret police, 1814. Artist unknown. (© bpk-Bildagentur)	208
5.3	Marshal Michel Ney. Portrait by J. S. Rouillard, 1815. (Musée de l'Histoire de France, Versailles/Heritage Images)	234
5.4	Passport of Justus von Gruner. (GStA PK, VI. HA, Nachlass Gruner, J. K., no. 27)	253
6.1	Willem I, Sovereign Prince of the Netherlands 1813–15, king of the Netherlands 1815–40. Portrait by Joseph Paelinck, 1819. (Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam)	265
6.2	Model of an optical telegraph (semaphore). Artist unknown, c.1798–1800. (Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam)	285
6.3	Cantillon and Marinot, the suspects in the (failed) attempt on Wellington in February 1818. Print from 1819. (Bibliothèque nationale de France)	289
7.1	Hans von Gagern, envoy for the Netherlands at the Congress of Vienna. Artist unknown, c.1815. (National Archive, The Hague)	318
7.2	Alexander Baring. Portrait by Thomas Lawrence, c.1815. (The Baring Archive, London)	341
8.1	Detailed plans for the construction of the Kezelfort in Oudenaarde, c.1830. (City Archive Oudenaarde, Vandermeersch family trust)	359

8.2	Prussian proposal to take extra land from France, 1815 (outlined with a bold line). (GStA PK, III. HA, MdA, I. no. 1461)	366
8.3	Lieutenant General Cornelis Kraijenhoff. Portrait by H. J. Slothouwer, 1838. (Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam)	377
8.4	‘Pour la Fête Du Roy! Par Élisabeth Garnerin’, print of the balloon ride during the celebration of the Allied victory over Napoleon, under the supervision of the Prussian King Friedrich Wilhelm III, 1815. Artist unknown, 1815. (© Smithsonian National Air & Space Museum)	400
8.5	The monument in Antibes, France, in memory of its protection from the Allied occupation, erected in May 1818 (when the end of the occupation elsewhere in France came into view). (Photo by the author)	424
10.1	Wellington musing at Waterloo. Painting by B. R. Haydon, 1839. (© National Portrait Gallery, London)	445

MAPS

0.1	General Map of Europe in 1815. (Erik Goosmann © 2020, Mappa Mundi Cartography)	page 5
0.2	The Allied occupation of France, July–December 1815. (Erik Goosmann © 2020, Mappa Mundi Cartography)	6
0.3	Map of the Wellington Barrier, 1815–30. (Erik Goosmann © 2020, Mappa Mundi Cartography)	7
1.1	General map of Europe in 1815. (Erik Goosmann © 2020, Mappa Mundi Cartography)	37
4.1	The Allied occupation of France, July–December 1815. (Erik Goosmann © 2020, Mappa Mundi Cartography)	142
4.2	The Allied occupation according to the Treaty of Paris, December 1815–18. (Erik Goosmann © 2020, Mappa Mundi Cartography)	194
8.1	Map of the Wellington Barrier, 1815–30. (Erik Goosmann © 2020, Mappa Mundi Cartography)	370

TABLES

7.1 French payments: treaty provisions	page 326
7.2 Overview of the claims filed, liquidated and paid, of amounts granted to participants in the Convention of 25 April 1818 and corresponding rentes granted to Allies on the continent	345
7.3 Payments: expected and final	351

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

A journey into the nineteenth century requires suitable luggage, especially if one is a child of the twentieth century and departs from the twenty-first. People did things differently two hundred years ago. The international language was French, everything was written by hand, in Germany still in the oftentimes hardly legible Kurrentschrift. What complicates matters even more is the fact that the historical people I encountered were not even from the nineteenth century, but came from the eighteenth century – an era of pompadoured wigs that seems even more distant in time and customs. How should we then begin to understand what a politician, general or diplomat meant when talking about the balance of power, about peace or security?

I have been able to follow through with this voyage back in time and space and make sense of these historical encounters only thanks to my group of travel companions. My European Research Council group – Constantin Ardeleanu, Susanne Keesman, Wouter Klem, Erik de Lange, Melle Lyklema, Ozan Ozavci, Joep Schenk, Jossie van Til – accompanied me along the winding paths, through the mists of the immediate post-1815 years, and helped me avoid pitfalls and dead alleys.¹ Our group's student assistants were also indispensable; without them I would still be wandering about: Yannick Balk, Annelotte Janse, Hannah Joosse, Paul Kardoulakis, Eva van de Kimmenade, Nicolette Moors and Celine Mureau, with Yannick and Celine being of essential help during the final stretch. The NWO Blueprints group in Utrecht – Clemens van den Berg, Trineke Palm, Peter-Ben Smit and Jorrit Steehouder – and the GIB/Conflict section in our History Department provided support and inspiration throughout. In between, the students of my MA tutorial on 1815 – Carla, Daan, Leone, Merit, Rob, Tim and Yannick – were a great audience for finding and testing the main arguments. I am grateful to Ozan, Wouter and Erik for helping me find my way through various archives, to Yannick for the beautiful images, to Erik Goosmann for the elegant maps and to Carla Spiegel and Myrthe van Groningen for the fine-tuning of the English edition.

¹ The research leading to these results also received funding from the ERC under the European Union's Seventh Framework Programme (FP/2007-2013) / ERC Grant Agreement n.615313.

Inspiration and insight into the timescapes and temporalities of the early nineteenth century came from Chris Clark, Christine Haynes, Mark Jarrett, Lotte Jensen, Matthijs Lok, Niek van Sas, Glenda Sluga and Brian Vick. Eckart Conze's support, his ideas on historicizing security and presence in Utrecht in 2017 were essential to this project. Susan Legêne helped me understand the nexus between the Concert of Europe and Empire. Without Mieke Canneman-van Leeuwen I would not have been able to decipher the crucial texts in the Kurrentschrift; I am very grateful for her patient help. Christoph Baumgartner, Guido de Bruin, Eckart Conze, Lotte Jensen, John Kok, Kees Noorda, Maarten van Riel and Maarten Wildervanck read and provided valuable comments.

Essential for a journey into uncharted territory – here, the winding trail of the Allied Council – were the archives and their guardians, the archivists, who were so very friendly everywhere. Stijn Lybeert at the Oudenaarde City Archives, Philip Schofield from the Bentham Papers in London and Christian Schwarzbach from the Secret State Archives Prussian Cultural Heritage Foundation in Berlin deserve a special reference for their patient and lengthy answers to my manifold requests.

The journey also went via Cambridge, through the charming gates of St Catherine's, where Chris Clark and Hans van de Ven invited me as visiting fellow to work on this project, and enjoy the lively discussions there and within the History Faculty. Colin Higgins, Andrew McKenzie-McHarg, Rachel Hoffman, Matthew Champion and Mary-Ann Middelkoop were perfect sparring partners.

At the end of the tour the book came in sight, first the Dutch one, but only thanks to the encouraging words of Joost Dankers, Marieke van Oostrom and Mai Spijkers, who advised me to make this story accessible to a broader audience. For the English version, I owe so much to Michael Watson, who encouraged me to write this history years ago. John Kok was of invaluable assistance in providing me with the English translation of the first Dutch draft, which I could then complement and adapt into the current, final one, but only with the help of Ruth Boyes at Cambridge University Press and Jane Burkowski.

Roland and the children descended with me into underground mines and fortresses, helped me to navigate the Wellington Barrier and were always willing to listen to my endless stories of distant battles, Napoleon, Wellington or those marvellous radical women in Brussels. I am grateful for their companionship throughout this adventure. The story of this journey is also theirs.