The Remaking of Republican Turkey

Between 1945 and 1960, the birth of a multi-party democracy and NATO membership radically transformed Turkey’s foreign relations and domestic politics. As Turkish politicians, intellectuals and voters rethought their country’s relationship with its past and its future to facilitate democratization, a new alliance with the United States was formed. In this book, Nicholas L. Danforth demonstrates how these transformations helped consolidate a consensus on the nature of Turkish modernity that continues to shape current political and cultural debates. He reveals the surprisingly nuanced and often paradoxical ways that both secular modernizers and their Islamist critics deployed Turkey’s famous clichés about East and West, as well as tradition and modernity, to advance their agendas. By drawing on a diverse array of published and archival sources, Danforth offers a tour de force exploration of the relationship between democracy, diplomacy, modernity, Westernization, Ottoman historiography and religion in mid-century Turkey.

Nicholas L. Danforth has written widely about Turkey, US foreign policy, and the Middle East for publications including The Atlantic, Foreign Affairs, Foreign Policy, The New York Times and The Washington Post. He received his PhD in History from Georgetown University.
The Remaking of Republican Turkey

Memory and Modernity Since the Fall of the Ottoman Empire

NICHOLAS L. DANFORTH
To my parents
Contents

List of Figures \hspace{1cm} page viii
Acknowledgments \hspace{1cm} ix

Introduction \hspace{1cm} 1
1 A Nation Votes: Democratic Modernity for the Masses \hspace{1cm} 12
2 Turkey Attends the American Classroom: US Modernity as Policy and Propaganda \hspace{1cm} 38
3 Asia in Europe, Europe in Asia: The Possibilities of Synthesis \hspace{1cm} 69
4 Multipurpose Empire: Ottoman History in Republican Turkey \hspace{1cm} 97
5 Making the Past Modern: Popular History in Print \hspace{1cm} 126
6 Ottomans, Arabs, and Americans: Geography and Identity in Turkish Diplomacy \hspace{1cm} 150
7 The Path to Progress and to God: Islamic Modernism for the Cold War \hspace{1cm} 188

Conclusion \hspace{1cm} 222
Bibliography \hspace{1cm} 229
Index \hspace{1cm} 243
Figures

1.1 Banner from Ulus on the morning of Turkey’s first free election, May 14, 1950.
1.2 İsmet İnönü watching democracy sail away, with Bülent Ecevit to his right. Zafer, 1957.
2.2 Bülent Ecevit photographing a football game in North Carolina, 1954.
3.2 “Turkish woman: ‘I’m ashamed of both of you.’” Akbaba, 1952.
4.1 Zafer’s Conquest Day special insert, May 29, 1953.
4.2 Front pages from Vatan (left) and Cumhuriyet (right) on May 29, 1953.
5.1 “İstanbul 10 Miles.” Mid-century folk art from the US Navy.
5.2 Turkish officer inspects a member of the Mehter band in İbrahim Konyah’s photograph, 1953.
5.3 Munif Fehim’s illustration for the introduction to Famous Men, 1935.
5.4 “Is there no good Muslim left to save me from the hands of these infidels?” from Tülbentçi’s serialized Hayrettin Barbarossa novel in Ulus, 1948.
5.5 President Celal Bayar reading History World, undated.
7.1 Covers of True Path, Light of Islam, Serdengeçti, and Kemalism, the Reform of Our Religion.
It is a pleasure to acknowledge my deep gratitude to so many people who made writing this book not only possible but even, at moments, enjoyable: Aviel Roshwald and Mustafa Aksakal, who advised my research from the outset; David Painter and Nathan Citino, who offered further insight; Maria Marsh, who guided this work to completion as editor; Howard Eissenstat, Nora Fisher-Onar, Ryan Gingeras, Selim Koru, Daphne McCurdy, and Behlül Özkan, who took the time to comment so thoughtfully on my manuscript; an army of librarians, archivists, and secondhand booksellers, who kept so many sources alive through their efforts; the copy editors, who made me appear literate; Alan Makovsky and Amberin Zaman, who were consistently encouraging; Soha Sarkis, Graham Cornwell, Elçin Arabacı, James Ryan, Zachary Foster, Onur İşçi, Lale Can, Sam Dolbee, and the rest of my cohort at Georgetown, who all helped make graduate school that much better; Sarah-Neel Smith, who shared her enthusiasm for Ecevit as well as his archives; Joe and Laura Clinton, who fed and hosted me during my research; Sarah Dadouch, who asked to be acknowledged; Eric Gettig, Graham Pitts, and Daniel Singer, who were good friends throughout the process; Chris Gratien, who had his moments; Irina Levin, who survived the writing firsthand; Chris Trapani, who was always game to celebrate Fetih Günü; Merve Tahiroğlu, who is more excited about this book than I am; anyone else, who I might have forgotten; my sister Ann, who makes everything more entertaining; and of course my parents, who gave me my interest in the world.

ix