

Contents

Acknowledgements	page viii
Introduction	1
1 ‘An Awful Remedy’: Irish Famine Migration and Laissez-Faire Theodicy, 1846–1853	22
2 ‘A Long Train of Moral Evils’: The End of Convict Transportation and the Rise of Assisted Emigration to Australia, c. 1837–1853	57
3 ‘The Most Perfect Skeletons I Ever Saw’: ‘Liberated’ African Immigration and the Free Trade Crisis in the British Caribbean, 1838–1850	101
4 ‘A Stranger to the Facts Will Hardly Credit the Negligence’: Indian Indentured Immigration to the British Caribbean I, 1838–1852	139
5 ‘Not Altogether of a Hopeful Character’: Free Immigration, Gender Imbalance, and Racial Exclusion in Australia, 1848–1860	176
6 ‘A New Epoch in the History of the Experiment’: Indian Indentured Immigration to the British Caribbean II, 1852–1870	217
Conclusion: Migration, the Imperial State, and the British Empire in 1860	260
Index	272