

HOW TO END A WAR

How and when should we end a war? What place should the pathways to a war's end have in war planning and decision-making? This volume treats the topic of ending war as part and parcel of how wars begin and how they are fought – a unique, complex problem, worthy of its own conversation. New essays by leading thinkers and practitioners in the fields of philosophical ethics, international relations, and military law reflect on the problem and show that it is imperative that we address not only the resolution of war, but how and if a war as waged can accommodate a future peace. The essays collectively solidify the topic and underline its centrality to the future of military ethics, strategy, and war.

GRAHAM PARSONS is Associate Professor of Philosophy at United State Military Academy, West Point.

MARK A. WILSON is Professor of Ethics at Villanova University.

Acknowledgments

This volume grew out of a conference that took place at West Point in the fall of 2019. The theme was inspired by the 100th anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Versailles and its notorious example of how not to end a war. This book would not have been possible without those who made that conference possible. We would like to thank Tony Baker, Thomas Carnes, Reece Doty, Hunter Cantrell, Kris Fox, Terron Johnson, Caroline Pagan, Gary Bridges, and Janice Torreta. West Point's Department of English and Philosophy funded the conference. The Association of Graduates and the Center for Holocaust and Genocide Studies at West Point provided logistical support. Thanks also to Mark Doorley, Director of Villanova's Ethics Program, who has shown unwavering enthusiasm and backing for these collaborations.

Hilary Gaskin at Cambridge University Press has been patient and supportive of this project from the beginning. We are grateful for her vision and guidance.

We are most appreciative of the outstanding contributors to this volume. It is rare that one finds a group of scholars so collegial, open-minded, and mutually supportive. It has been inspiring to work with them. We wish everyone in the field were half as generous and kind. They deserve all credit for this book's quality.
