De mundo is a protreptic to philosophy in the form of a letter to Alexander the Great and has traditionally been ascribed to Aristotle. It offers a unique view of the cosmos, God and the relationship between them, which was inspired by Aristotle but written by a later author. The author provides an outline of cosmology, geography and meteorology, only to argue that a full understanding of the cosmos cannot be achieved without a proper grasp of God as its ultimate cause. To ensure such a grasp, the author provides a series of twelve carefully chosen interlocking analogies, building a complex picture in the reader’s mind. The work develops a distinctly Aristotelian picture of God and the cosmos while paying tribute to pre-Aristotelian philosophers and avoiding open criticism of rival schools of philosophy. De mundo exercised considerable influence in late antiquity and then in the Renaissance and Early Modern times.

Pavel Gregorić is Senior Research Fellow in the Institute of Philosophy in Zagreb, working on ancient, Renaissance and Early Modern philosophy. He is the author of Aristotle on the Common Sense (2007), and is a co-editor of the volume Encounters with Aristotelian Philosophy of Mind (2021) and a contributor to Hackett’s forthcoming new translation of Aristotle’s complete works.

George Karamanolis is Associate Professor in the Department of Philosophy at the University of Vienna. He is the author of Plato and Aristotle in Agreement? Platonists on Aristotle from Antiochus to Porphyry (2006) and The Philosophy of Early Christianity (2013), and co-edited Studies on Porphyry (with Anne Sheppard, 2007) and The Aporetic Tradition in Ancient Philosophy (with Vasilis Politis, Cambridge, 2017).
PSEUDO-ARISTOTLE: DE MUNDO (ON THE COSMOS)

A Commentary

EDITED BY

PAVEL GREGORIĆ
Institute of Philosophy in Zagreb, Croatia

GEORGE KARAMANOLIS
University of Vienna, Austria
Contents

List of Figures page vi
List of Contributors vii
Preface ix
List of Abbreviations xi

1 Introduction 1
Pavel Gregorić and George Karamanolis

2 On Philosophy and Its Proper Subject (Chapter 1) 14
George Karamanolis

3 The Heavenly Sphere (Chapter 2, 391b9–392a31) 33
Karel Thein

4 The Sublunary Domain (Chapters 2–3, 392a31–393a8) 62
Jakub Jirsa

5 Geography (Chapter 3, 393a9–394a6) 80
Irene Pajón Leyra and Hynek Bartoš

6 Meteorology (Chapter 4) 121
István Baksá

7 The Eternity of the Cosmos (Chapter 5) 149
Pavel Gregorić

8 God’s Relation to the Cosmos (Chapter 6) 176
Gábor Betegh and Pavel Gregorić

9 God’s Many Names (Chapter 7) 213
Vojtěch Hladký

Bibliography 231
Index 243
Figures

5.1 Map of the Mediterranean (by Pavel Gregorić)  page 88
5.2 Map of the inhabited world (by Pavel Gregorić)  111
6.1 Table of wet exhalations (by István Baksa)  127
6.2 Wind rose in De mondo  4 (by István Baksa)  129
6.3 Wind rose in Aristotle’s Meteorology  2.6 (by István Baksa)  130
6.4 Table of dry exhalations (by István Baksa)  133
6.5 Table of aerial phenomena (by István Baksa)  138
6.6 Table of earthquakes (by István Baksa, after Strohm 1970: 320)  139
8.2 Synopsis of analogies in De mondo  6 (by Pavel Gregorić)  202
Contributors

István Baksa received his PhD from Humboldt University of Berlin for his work on ancient meteorology.

Hynek Bartoš is Associate Professor at the Faculty of Humanities, Charles University in Prague.

Gábor Betegh is Laurence Professor of Ancient Philosophy at the University of Cambridge, formerly Professor of Philosophy at Central European University.

Pavel Gregorić is Senior Research Fellow at the Institute of Philosophy in Zagreb, formerly Associate Professor of Philosophy at the University of Zagreb.

Vojtěch Hladký is Assistant Professor at the Faculty of Science, Charles University in Prague.

Jakub Jirsa is Associate Professor at the Faculty of Arts, Charles University in Prague.

George Karamanolis is Associate Professor of Philosophy at the Faculty of Philosophy and Education, University of Vienna, formerly Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the University of Crete.

Irene Pajón Leira is Assistant Professor of Classics at the Faculty of Philology, University of Seville.

Karel Thein is Professor of Philosophy at the Faculty of Arts, Charles University in Prague.
Preface

This volume has its origin in the 6th Conference of the Southeast-European Association for Ancient Philosophy (SEAAP), which took place from 4 to 6 June 2010 in Rethymno, on the island of Crete. The conference was organised by George Karamanolis, who invited a group of scholars from Central and Southeast Europe to present chapter-based papers on De mundo. Most of the contributions to this volume are descendants of the papers originally presented there. When Pavel Gregorić and Gábor Betegh each made a presentation on one half of Chapter 6 and independently arrived at interpretations that converged to a surprising degree (and were in many regards at odds with the dominant view), they decided to further develop their ideas in a joint paper. They presented their paper at a conference in Paris in February 2011 and then further developed it in the article ‘Multiple Analogy in Ps.Aristotle, De mundo Ch. 6’, published in the Classical Quarterly in 2014.

George Karamanolis organised a meeting at the University of Munich in July 2012 to discuss the possibility of publishing a volume based on the papers presented in Rethymno. A number of points were agreed upon in Munich: first, it was decided that the volume would be a philosophical commentary on De mundo, focusing on the doctrines and arguments actually expounded in the treatise rather than on questions of authorship, dating and the sources of the treatise, which characterise most of the modern scholarship on De mundo. Second, it was proposed that Hynek Bartoš team up with the Spanish scholar specialising in ancient geography, Irene Pájon Leyra, who was also invited to the meeting. Third, it was acknowledged that instead of using the presentation on Chapter 5 given at the conference in Rethymno, a paper would be commissioned anew.

Unfortunately, a number of events conspired against the successful completion of the task at hand. The commissioning of a paper on Chapter 5 failed, some papers were delayed, and we learned that Johan Thom had been preparing a new English translation and commentary on De mundo, so work on the present volume was postponed for some time. Thom’s book Cosmic Order and Divine Power: Pseudo-Aristotle, ‘On the Cosmos’ appeared in 2014 and was met with well-deserved praise. By late 2015 it had become clear that Thom’s book – with an informative introduction to De mundo, an excellent new translation, brief notes and a set of essays on select topics related to the content and reception of De mundo – far from interfering with this project, would in fact be nicely complemented by the commentary presented in this volume.
Preface

In early 2016, Pavel Gregorić joined George Karamanolis as co-editor of this volume, the contributors were asked to revise their papers in the light of Thom’s book, and Pavel Gregorić took up the task of writing the paper on Chapter 5. With some minor delays, the manuscript was completed and submitted to the publisher in autumn 2018.

We would like to thank all the participants in the memorable Rethymno conference on De mundo in 2010. We are grateful to Professor Christof Rapp for his assistance in organising the 2012 meeting in Munich and to Gábor Betegh for all his substantive comments, encouragement and generous help in the course of preparing the manuscript. We are grateful to the editor, Dr Michael Sharp, who guided us through the process of preparing the manuscript for publication, and to two anonymous readers for Cambridge University Press for their helpful suggestions. We are also indebted to Mr Anthony Kroytor of the University of Vienna, who proofread the entire manuscript and improved our English.
Abbreviations

General words and titles of ancient works are abbreviated in accordance with the Oxford Classical Dictionary (4th edition). In addition, the following abbreviations are used in this volume:

- CAG Commentaria in Aristotelem Graeca, 23 vols (Berlin, 1882–1909)
- DG H. Diels, Doxographi Graeci (Berlin, 1879)
- SVF H. von Arnim, Stoicorum Veterum Fragmenta, 3 vols (Leipzig, 1903–5)