

Contents

Preface	page vii
1 Introduction: A Young Science with a Long History RICHARD E. TREMBLAY	1
2 From Birth in a British Orphanage to Assessments of American Indians' Development ELIZABETH JANE COSTELLO	26
3 From Rationing, Illness, and Stress to the Creation of a Major Longitudinal Birth Cohort JEAN GOLDING	46
4 From Country Girl in Southern Finland to Longitudinal Research into Alternatives to Aggression and Violence LEA PULKKINEN	71
5 From the Occupied Netherlands to the Pittsburgh Longitudinal Studies MAGDA STOUTHAMER-LOEBER AND ROLF LOEBER	95
6 From Boy to Man: From Delinquent Development to Old Age Crime DAVID P. FARRINGTON	122
7 Nurture and Nature: Surviving in the Shadows of War MENNO REINDERT KRUK	155
8 From Unruly Child to Political Protester and Promoter of an Ecology-Minded Concept of Development RAINER K. SILBEREISEN	188
9 From the Frustration–Aggression Hypothesis to Moral Reasoning and Action GIAN VITTORIO CAPRARA	215

vi	Contents
10	A Tortuous Path towards Understanding and Preventing the Development of Chronic Physical Aggression RICHARD E. TREMBLAY	241
11	From Childhood in a Ruined German City to Research on Crime and Violence FRIEDRICH LÖSEL	271
12	The Last War Baby: A Life of Studying Antisocial Behavior in Context BENJAMIN B. LAHEY	299
13	Comments on the Autobiographies of the World War II Babies by Younger Peers	324
	DANIEL S. NAGIN: The Good Fortune of World War II Babies	324
	DALE F. HAY: Talking about Their Generation	327
	MANUEL EISNER: Going Global – Learning from the War Babies on How to Attempt a Global Birth Cohort Study	333
	BRANDON C. WELSH: ‘Life’s Wealth Is to Do’: Reflections on Developmental and Prevention Science Pioneers in Understanding and Preventing Violence	338
	SYLVANA M. CÔTÉ: Seizing Opportunities and Overcoming Difficulties: How Three Women Became Trailblazers in Developmental Science	343
	ISABELLE OUELLET-MORIN: How Individual Strengths and Opportunities Shaped the Careers of Three Scientists and, Incidentally, the Birth of a Research Field	350
	Index	357