“A path-breaking set of essays that examines the driving forces and consequences of the transnationalization of criminal justice law and policy, with reference to criminalizing global social problems, tackling impunity for serious international crimes, and efforts to build human rights penal standards. The work is guided by a coherent theory of the varying roles of states in transnational legal orders. No student of contemporary criminal justice should miss the chance to learn from the theory and case studies.”

David Nelken, King’s College London

“Norms of criminal justice, no less than crime itself, refuse to remain neatly contained within national jurisdictions. Gregory Shaffer and Ely Aaronson’s collection of essays illustrates the ways in which a reasonably distinct transnational order has developed, become elaborated, and in some cases encountered contradiction and resistance. One of the book’s great insights is that the transnational legal ordering of criminal law has in some ways empowered the state to reclaim its own legal authority. Read this book, and you will appreciate the impossibility of dichotomizing the study of modern ‘national’ and ‘international’ criminal law.”

Beth A. Simmons, Andrea Mitchell University
Professor of Law, Political Science and Business Ethics, University of Pennsylvania

“The norms, institutions, and practices of criminal justice systems around the world have been deeply transformed in the last few decades by globalization and many new international and transnational legal regimes. Criminal justice, comparative law, and international law scholars are still grappling with these changes. By applying the illuminating theory of transnational legal ordering to criminal justice, this impressive group of top scholars gathered in this book provides crucial insights to make sense of these changes. This book is an essential tool for anyone interested in them.”

Máximo Langer, Professor of Law and Director of the Transnational Program on Criminal Justice, UCLA School of Law

TRANSNATIONAL LEGAL ORDERING OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE

Hard and soft law developed by international and regional organizations, transgovernmental networks, and international courts increasingly shape rules, procedures, and practices governing criminalization, policing, prosecution, and punishment. This dynamic calls into question traditional approaches that study criminal justice from a predominantly national perspective or that dichotomize the study of international from national criminal law. Building on socio-legal theories of transnational legal ordering, this book develops a new approach for studying the interaction between international and domestic criminal law and practice. Distinguished scholars from different disciplines apply this approach in ten case studies of transnational legal ordering that address transnational crimes such as money laundering, corruption, and human trafficking; international crimes such as mass atrocities; and human rights abuses in law enforcement. The book provides a comprehensive treatment of the changing transnational nature of criminal justice policy making and practice in today's globalized world.

GREGORY SHAFFER is Chancellor's Professor at the University of California, Irvine. His publications include seven books and more than one hundred articles and book chapters, including Constitution-Making and Transnational Legal Order (with Ginsburg and Halliday, 2019), Transnational Legal Orders (with Halliday, 2015), and Transnational Legal Ordering and State Change (2013).

ELY AARONSON is Associate Professor at the University of Haifa, Faculty of Law. His main areas of scholarship include legal history, socio-legal theory, criminal justice, and comparative and transnational legal theory. He is the author of From Slave Abuse to Hate Crime: The Criminalization of Racial Violence in American History (2014).

CAMBRIDGE STUDIES IN LAW AND SOCIETY

Founded in 1997, Cambridge Studies in Law and Society is a hub for leading scholarship in socio-legal studies. Located at the intersection of law, the humanities, and the social sciences, it publishes empirically innovative and theoretically sophisticated work on law's manifestations in everyday life: from discourses to practices, and from institutions to cultures. The series editors have longstanding expertise in the interdisciplinary study of law, and welcome contributions that place legal phenomena in national, comparative, or international perspective. Series authors come from a range of disciplines, including anthropology, history, law, literature, political science, and sociology.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The moment of saying “thank you” is always a pleasure. We are delighted to express our appreciation and gratitude to the outstanding group of scholars who joined us in this collaborative project. The opportunity to exchange ideas and learn from each other’s work has been deeply enlightening and enjoyable. The substantial effort each of the contributors devoted to this project has helped sharpen the arguments that run through this book and develop new ways of thinking about the larger theoretical questions concerning the globalization of criminal law.

This book arose out of a series of workshops we held on the topic at the annual meeting of the Law and Society Association in Toronto and a two-day exchange at the University of California, Irvine, in 2018. We thank the participants in these events for the rich and stimulating discussions, including the commentators for the different papers: Eve Darian-Smith, Terence Halliday, Manuel Iturralde, Prabha Kotiswaran, Maximo Langer, Ron Levi, Felix Lüth, Mona Lynch, Sally Merry, Keramet Reiter, Wayne Sandholtz, and Joachim Savelsberg.

For funding for the two-day workshop at the University of California, Irvine, we thank the Center on Globalization, Law, and Society (GLAS). We also thank the Israeli Science Foundation for the support received under the terms of Ely Aaronson’s research grant on the globalized dimensions of criminalization processes (grant no. 1281/14).

We are grateful to Finola O’Sullivan, Marianne Nield, and the editorial team at Cambridge University Press for their support and guidance through the editorial and publishing process. We also thank the series editors of Cambridge Studies in Law and Society (Mark Fathi Massoud, Jens Meierhenrich, and Rachel Stern) and two anonymous reviewers for their valuable suggestions.

Finally, we take great pleasure in thanking our families – Michele, Brooks, and Sage (for Greg), and Karin, Daniel, and Yahli (for Ely) – for their support. It is with love and gratitude that we dedicate this book to them.
