

Contents

Preface	page ix
1 Typical Human, Typical Animal? . . . . .	1
Reconceptualising the Animal – an Introduction
2 Ginger Boris Doesn't Like to Be Alone . . . . .	16
On Behaviour, Stress, and the Blessing of Socially Stable Relationships
3 Cats Are Happy When They're Playing . . . . .	34
On the Well-Being, Emotions, and Humane Treatment of Animals
4 Nature Versus Nurture . . . . .	57
Genes, Environment, and Behaviour: New Answers to an Old Question
5 Clever Dogs and Ingenious Ravens . . . . .	81
All Animals Can Learn, Many Can Think, and Some Can Even Recognise Themselves in a Mirror
6 Animal Personalities . . . . .	100
The Development of Behaviour and the Discovery of Individuality
7 Altruistic Squirrels and Egotistical Lions . . . . .	119
The Sociobiological Revolution
8 Animals Like Us . . . . .	142
A Summary
Bibliography	148