| 1 An Interface Theory of Universal Grammar and Iconicity             | 1             |
| 1.1 The Central Question: When and How of UG-I                       | 2             |
| 1.2 Putting UG-I in More Perspectives                                | 6             |
| 1.2.1 Related Works  | 7             |
| 1.2.2 On Grammaticalization  | 10            |
| 1.2.3 A Biological Perspective                                       | 12            |
| 1.2.4 A UG-Heavy Approach  | 13            |
| 1.2.5 Further Clarifying the UG-I Interface                          | 15            |
| 2 The Serial Verb Constructions                                      | 17            |
| 2.1 Linear Iconicity in the SVC: Facts and Non-Facts                 | 19            |
| 2.1.1 The Basic Pattern  | 19            |
| 2.1.2 Newmeyer on the Causative Construction                         | 21            |
| 2.1.3 Baker on the Purposive SVC                                     | 23            |
| 2.1.4 Another “Problem” with Linear Iconicity from the Purposive SVC | 24            |
| 2.1.5 Carstens’ Objections to Linear Iconicity                       | 27            |
| 2.2 Un-deriving the Derivational Efforts on Linear Iconicity         | 29            |
| 2.2.1 Baker’s Multiple-Headed VP                                     | 29            |
| 2.2.2 Carstens’ Antisymmetric Structure for the SVC                  | 34            |
| 2.2.3 Other Efforts to Derive the Iconic Word Order of the SVCs      | 35            |
| 2.3 De-unifying a Uniform Treatment of the SVCs                      | 37            |
| 2.3.1 Take It to Vary   | 38            |
| 2.3.2 An Unwitting Argument against the Uniform Analysis of the SVCs | 43            |
| 2.3.3 Cleft or No Cleft? That Is the Question                        | 47            |
| 2.3.4 A Compound Support   | 51            |
| 2.3.5 In Sum . . .   | 53            |
| 2.4 Linear Iconicity and Its Company                                 | 53            |
| 2.4.1 A Serial Verb Construction Must Involve . . . Only Verbs       | 55            |
| 2.4.2 Neither Verb Is the Thematic Argument of the Other             | 58            |
| 2.4.3 No Relational Words Around                                     | 60            |
| 2.4.4 Argument-Sharing   | 61            |
| 2.4.5 Summing Up the SVC Traits                                      | 66            |
