

MEMORY AND MORTALITY IN RENAISSANCE ENGLAND

Drawing together leading scholars of early modern memory studies and death studies, Memory and Mortality in Renaissance England explores and illuminates the interrelationships of these categories of Renaissance knowing and doing, theory and praxis. The collection features an extended Introduction that establishes the rich vein connecting these two fields of study and investigation. Thereafter, the collection is arranged into three subsections, ‘The Arts of Remembering Death’, ‘Grounding the Remembrance of the Dead’, and ‘The Ends of Commemoration’, where contributors analyse how memory and mortality intersected in writings, devotional practice, and visual culture. The book will appeal to scholars of early modern literature and culture, book history, art history, and the history of mnemonics and thanatology, and will prove an indispensable guide for researchers, instructors, and students alike.

WILLIAM E. ENGEL is the Nick B. Williams Professor of English at the University of the South, in Sewanee, Tennessee, USA, and author of six books on literary history including Mapping Mortality (University of Massachusetts Press, 1995), Death and Drama in Renaissance England (Oxford University Press, 2002), and The Printer as Author in Early Modern English Book History: John Day and the Fabrication of a Protestant Memory Art (Routledge, 2022); and, with Rory Loughnane and Grant Williams, The Memory Arts in Renaissance England (Cambridge University Press, 2016) and The Death Arts in Renaissance England (Cambridge University Press, 2022).

RORY LOUGHNANE is Reader in Early Modern Studies at the University of Kent, UK. He is the author and editor of many books and play editions, including, for Cambridge University Press, Late Shakespeare, 1608–1613 (2012), The Memory Arts in Renaissance England (2016), Early Shakespeare, 1588–1594 (2020), and The Death Arts in Renaissance England (2022). He is a series editor of Cambridge’s Elements in Shakespeare and Text and a general editor of The Revels Plays.

GRANT WILLIAMS is Associate Professor of English Literature at Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada, and has coedited five books:

Why recount they not oft, with Philip the King of the Macedons, that they are born as other, and are men, and no more? For he, after many luckily achieved enterprises in his wars against the Athenians, his enemies vanquished and put to flight ... commanded one his servant[s], every morning at his uprising, to cry to him 'Remember, thou art a man'. Would our nobles in like manner charge herewith some one of their servants ... [to] sing this song in their deaf ears and revive to their dulled memory their frail mortality.

Laurence Humphrey, The nobles or of nobility
 (London: 1563; STC 13964), R5^r.

The day wherein we first behold the light,
 Begins our Death, for life doth daily fade,
 Our day of Death begins our happie life
 We are in danger, till our debt is paid.
 Life is but lent, we owe it to the Lord.
 When 'tis demanded, it must be restor'd.

Rachel Speght, Mortalities memorandum
 (London: 1621; STC 23057), F2^r.

How necessary a thing it is for all degrees of men, as well the high as the low, noble and ignoble, rich and poor, and how behooveful to their soul's welfare both now and hereafter, to represent to their remembrance the memory of death and mortality by some good means whatsoever, in any sort howsoever ... in regard as well of the misery of this present life, which is transitory, as of the happiness of the life in expectancy, which is everlastingly enduring.

Paul Wentworth, The miscellanie, or, A registrie, and methodicall directorye of orizons (London: 1615; STC 25244), Z4^v.

Twice hath sad Philomele left off to sing
 Her mortifying sonnets to the spring.
 Twice at the sylvan choristers' desire
 She hath lent her music to complete their choir,
 Since all devouring Death on her took seizure,
 And Tellus's womb involved so rich a treasure.
 Yet still my heart is overwhelmed with grief,
 And time, nor tears, will give my woes relief.
 Twelve times hath Phoebe, hornéd, seemed to fight,
 As often filled them with her brother's light,
 Since she did close her sparkling diamond eyes;
 Yet my sad heart, for her still pining, dies.
 Hester Pulter, 'Upon the Death of my Dear and Lovely Daughter,
 Jane Pulter', Poems breathed forth by the noble Hadassas (c. 1661; University of Leeds Library, Brotherton Collection, MS Lt q 32).

Acknowledgements

It is a special grace that the primary research for this book was conducted by the contributors to this volume prior to the closing of the libraries in 2020–21 during the global pandemic. We are grateful to Emily Hockley at Cambridge University Press for seeing right away the value of a collection of essays by a dozen internationally renowned scholars of early modern literary history working on topics pertaining to the cultural cross-pollination of the death arts and the memory arts.

Portions of the work, including especially the editors' Introduction, have been discussed and presented at the following venues and conferences: Carleton University English Department (2017); Centre for Medieval and Early Modern Studies at the University of Kent (2019); Eton College (2019); Renaissance Society of America (Toronto, 2019; New Orleans, 2018; Chicago, 2017; Boston, 2016); Shakespeare Association of America (Denver/virtual, 2020); and Sixteenth Century Studies Conference (Milwaukee, 2017; Albuquerque, 2018; St. Louis, 2019). We are especially grateful to Bill Sherman and the staff at the Warburg Institute for allowing us to host 'Memory and Mortality: An Interdisciplinary Symposium', on 17 May 2019, and to all the contributors, attendees and correspondents who made it such a memorable and useful event.

For support with securing images, we are especially grateful to Adam Hawkins, Associate Director of Informational Literacy and Instructional Technology at Sewanee, The University of the South; and Cressida Williams, Head of Archives at Canterbury Cathedral Archives and Library.

William Engel would like to thank the Office of the Dean at Sewanee, the University of the South, for granting a research leave (2020–21); Sewanee's Alderson-Tillinghast Fund for supplementing travel to archives abroad (2018–20); and the English Department Reading Group: Stephanie L. Batkie, Matthew Irving, Maha Jafri, James Ross Macdonald,
