POETRY AND POETICS IN THE PRESOCRATIC PHILOSOPHERS

Of the Presocratic thinkers traditionally credited with the foundation of Greek philosophy, Xenophanes, Parmenides and Empedocles are exceptional for writing in verse. This is the first book-length literarycritical study of their work. It locates the surviving fragments in their performative and wider cultural contexts, applying intertextual and intratextual analyses in order to reconstruct the significance and impact they conveyed for ancient audiences and readers. Building on insights from literary theory and the philosophy of literature, the book sheds new light on these authors' philosophical projects and enriches our appreciation of their works as literary artefacts. It also expands our knowledge of the genres in which they wrote, of the literary culture of the Western Greek world, and of the development of Greek poetics from the Archaic to the Classical periods, exposing the influence of these thinkers on more famous Sophistic and Platonic ideas about literature.

Acknowledgements

In the lengthy process of bringing this book to light, I have racked up debts of gratitude that no honest man can pay. I am grateful to my undergraduate alma mater, Trinity College, Oxford, both for awarding me a scholarship to assist with funding my Master's degree and for later appointing me as a stipendiary lecturer from 2014–2015. The doctoral thesis on which this book is loosely based was undertaken at Magdalen College, Oxford from 2012–2015 and was made possible by a studentship from the Arts and Humanities Research Council. I have been able to turn it into a book as a result of being appointed, first, as a Teaching Associate at Cambridge during the year 2015–2016 and then as the A. G. Leventis Research Fellow in Ancient Greek Culture at UCL from 2016–2020. In addition to these educational institutions, thanks are due to many libraries, but to three in particular. I have spent more hours in the Bodleian Library, the Institute of Classical Studies library and the British Library than any therapist would recommend.

For my doctoral thesis, I had the great good fortune to be supervised by Tobias Reinhardt and Bruno Currie, who set examples of scholarly rigour and erudition that I have struggled to follow. My examiners, Gregory Hutchinson and Malcolm Heath, provided a wealth of detailed, generous and constructive comments, in light of which I realised that, in an attempt to perform the due diligence required of a doctoral thesis, I had become too entangled in the familiar exegetical debates surrounding these authors (precisely the ones I had hoped to avoid) and had to approach the topic anew.

Cambridge and UCL provided immensely stimulating environments in which to refine my thinking. At Cambridge, I was especially made to feel welcome by David Butterfield, James Clackson, Renaud Gagné, Richard Hunter, Emily Kneebone and Tim Whitmarsh. My colleagues at UCL have been supportive far beyond what could reasonably be expected. I am particularly grateful to Peter Agócs, Nicolò Benzi, Elena Cagnoli Fiecconi, x

Adam Lecznar, Fiachra Mac Góráin, Gesine Manuwald, Phiroze Vasunia and Maria Wyke for mentorship, camaraderie and comments on earlier drafts.

Outside of UCL, Stefan Sienkiewicz, Henry Spelman, Barney Taylor, Rob Watt and Lizzie Wells were kind enough to read individual chapters, always with helpful suggestions. For more general encouragement with this project and my career, I am grateful to Felix Budelmann, Edith Hall, Casper de Jonge, Beppe Pezzini, David Sider, Shaul Tor, Gail Trimble and Victoria Wohl. I would also like to thank Michael Sharp and Cambridge University Press for taking a punt on this typescript and for always responding to my queries in a helpful and timely manner. The two anonymous readers for the Press provided detailed, valid and immensely helpful criticisms which are greatly appreciated.

Moving on to longer-standing and less formal debts, like any scholar, I owe more to my teachers than can be put into words. I cannot list them all, but from my childhood and adolescence, I should single out Jonathan Katz, Andy Mylne and the late Hazel Beasley; and from undergraduate days, Bob Cowan Gregory Hutchinson, Mike Inwood, Laura Swift, Christopher Taylor (under whom I first studied the Presocratics) and, above all, Peter Brown, who sadly passed away as this typescript was under peer review. For friendship and eager discussion of all things Classical, I thank, in addition to individuals already named, Anthony Ellis, Dan Jolowicz, Scarlett Kingsley and Henry Mason. In this regard, I must also mention again Fiachra Mac Góráin for unfailing assistance and advice from the period of the conception of this project right through to its completion.

My greatest debts of all are owed to my family and to my wife. My father, Charlie, first inspired my interest in the ancient world with trips to the British Museum in my early childhood. Through the difficulties of his long illness and young death, my mother, Emma, moved mountains to the ends of the earth and back again for the upbringing of me and my siblings. My brother Alex and my sister Bella have been a constant support in matters professional and personal. Finally, I would never have gotten remotely close to completing this book were it not for the encouragement, love and companionship of Lizzie, with whom it is my great joy and honour to share my life.

Note on Fragment Numbers

I generally refer to fragments and testimonia of the Presocratics and Sophists using the numbering systems of both LM and DK, with the LM number placed first. 'P', 'D' and 'R' numbers are from LM, whereas 'A' and 'B' numbers are from DK. Occasionally, it has not been possible to include both, since some fragments and testimonia are only included in one or other edition. A further complication is that the two editions do not always divide the fragments in the same way: DK may include lines in a fragment that are considered spurious by LM, and, in some cases, two fragments that are kept separate in DK are joined together in LM (e.g. Parmenides B7 and B8 in DK are treated in LM as a single passage, D8). Where I only give the fragment numbers and a single line number, it can be assumed that the extent of the fragment – and therefore the line number – is the same in both editions. For instance, Xenophanes 'D49=B34.4' refers to line 4 of both D49 and B34, and the extent of the two fragments is identical. Where I give two separate line numbers, this is not the case. For instance, Parmenides D8.2=B7.2 refers to line 2 of D8, which is the same as line 2 of B7, but the two fragments are vastly different in extent, since D8 also includes the much longer B8.
