ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am very grateful to various seminar audiences for their helpful and critical responses to the presentation of some of the material in this book. Rebecca Laemmlé's comments and suggestions greatly improved the final product.

Work on this project has taken me well out of my usual comfort zone, and I have come to realise (once again) just how fortunate I am to be able to work amidst the riches of the Classics Faculty Library in Cambridge; I would like to offer my warmest thanks to the Library staff for all their help and indulgence over several decades.

When this book was all but complete, Neil Hopkinson, one of my colleagues both in Trinity College and on the editorial board of Cambridge Greek and Latin Classics, died very suddenly. The terrible shock and distress at his death all over the world of Classics was the clearest mark of the respect and affection in which he was held. Neil had read and commented upon virtually the whole typescript of an earlier version of this book; he was an exacting critic with a remarkable knowledge of Greek, and his characteristically brief and pointed annotations often made me ask new questions and wonder whether I had really got things right. This book is dedicated to his memory.
