Introduction to Education
Knowledge, Practice, Engagement

Introduction to Education provides pre-service teachers with an overview of the context, craft and practice of teaching in Australian schools as they commence the journey from learner to classroom teacher. Each chapter poses questions about the nature of teaching students, and guides readers through the Australian Professional Standards for Teachers. Incorporating recent research and theoretical literature, Introduction to Education presents a critical consideration of the professional, policy and curriculum contexts of teaching in Australia.

Features of Introduction to Education include:

- chapter opening stimulus materials and questions to activate prior learning and challenge assumptions
- the voices of experienced teachers, pre-service teachers and students to foster reflective practice skills
- extracts from policy, theoretical and research literature, with accompanying questions to support the development of academic and professional literacy
- authentic classroom examples of planning and implementation that build familiarity with best practice and strategies for differentiation, inclusion and engagement.

This text covers theoretical topics in chapters addressing assessment, planning, safe learning environments, and working with colleagues, families/carers and communities. More practical chapters discuss professional experience and building a career after graduation. Rigorous in conception and practical in scope, Introduction to Education welcomes new educators to the theory and practical elements of teaching, learning and professional practice.

Heather Sharp is Associate Professor in the School of Education at the University of Newcastle.
Sue Hudson is Deputy Dean of Professional Experience at Southern Cross University.
Noelene Weatherby-Fell is Coordinator of the Master of Teaching at the University of Wollongong.
Jennifer Charteris is Senior Lecturer in the School of Education at the University of New England.
Bernard Brown is Assistant Professor in the Faculty of Education at the University of Canberra.
Jason Lodge is Associate Professor in the School of Education at the University of Queensland.
Lisa McKay-Brown is Senior Lecturer in the Melbourne Graduate School of Education at the University of Melbourne.
Tracey Sempowicz is Lecturer in Education at the University of the Sunshine Coast.
Rachel Buchanan is Senior Lecturer in the School of Education at the University of Newcastle.
Scott Imig is Associate Professor in the School of Education at the University of Newcastle.
Peter Hudson is Associate Professor in the School of Education at Southern Cross University.
Michela Vergano is Lecturer in the Faculty of Education at the University of Canberra.
Michael Walsh is Lecturer in the Faculty of Education at the University of Canberra.
INTRODUCTION

Knowledge
Practice
Engagement

Heather Sharp + Sue Hudson + Noelene Weatherby-Fell + Jennifer Charteris + Bernard Brown + Jason Lodge + Lisa McKay-Brown + Tracey Sempowicz + Rachel Buchanan + Scott Imig + Peter Hudson + Michaela Vergano + Michael Walsh
Preface ix
About the authors x
Acknowledgements xiii
Using your VitalSource eBook xvi

PART 1: INTRODUCTION TO EDUCATION 1

1 What is a teacher?  2
   Heather Sharp
   Introduction 4
   Studying at university 5
   Teachers in the community: how are teachers viewed by the public, the media, students and parents? 9
   Teaching as a profession 13
   What is it to have education as a career? 17
   Education in the future: what are some long-lasting impacts of education and teachers? 22
   What is resilience and how can I obtain it? 25
   Conclusion 28
   Further resources 29
   References 29

2 How do I prepare to be a teacher?  31
   Noelene Weatherby-Fell
   Introduction 32
   Preparing to be a teacher 33
   Core skills 35
   Exploring my personal attributes 49
   How do I prepare to grow, manage and sustain myself as a teacher? Me and the APST 55
   Conclusion 58
   Further resources 59
   References 59

3 Why is the education system organised this way?  65
   Heather Sharp
   Introduction 67
   Schooling in Australia: a historical overview 68
   Schooling in Australia and around the world: a contemporary perspective 70
   Australian education systems 73
   Schooling (curriculum) in the national context 84
   Conclusion 86
   Further resources 88
   References 88
CONTENTS

4  Who are my students?  91
   Tracey Sempowicz
   Introduction  93
   The Australian context  94
   Socio-economic diversity and education  102
   Ability and disability  108
   Mental wellbeing  111
   Conclusion  115
   Further resources  116
   References  116

PART 2: UNDERSTANDING LEARNING AND UNDERSTANDING TEACHING  121

5  How do students learn?  122
   Jason Lodge
   Introduction  124
   What is learning?  124
   Theories of learning  127
   Factors impacting on learning  134
   Individual learning needs and personalisation  137
   How do we know when learning has occurred?  141
   Learning in the twenty-first century  142
   Conclusion  144
   Further resources  144
   References  145

6  Why are students taught this?  147
   Bernard Brown and Michael Walsh
   Introduction  148
   Definitions of curriculum  148
   The Australian Curriculum  152
   Experience of the curriculum  159
   Conclusion  165
   Further resources  166
   References  167

7  How do I plan for effective teaching and learning?  169
   Sue Hudson and Noelene Weatherby-Fell
   Introduction  170
   Who are my students?  171
   Consideration for the learners in my classroom  175
   What do I want my students to learn?  179
CONTENTS

8 How do I implement effective teaching and learning? 203

Sue Hudson and Noelene Weatherby-Fell

Introduction 204
Preparing for planning effective teaching and learning 206
Enacting planning for effective teaching 216
Hannah and Matthew implement effective teaching 222
Reflection on teaching 231
Conclusion 234
Acknowledgement 236
Further resources 236
References 237

9 How do I assess, provide feedback and report on learning? 238

Jennifer Charteris

Introduction 240
Forms of assessment 240
How do I provide opportunities for feedback? 248
Moderation and reporting 251
Conclusion 255
Further resources 256
References 256

10 What is in a teacher’s toolkit? 259

Jennifer Charteris

Introduction 260
Creating a classroom culture for learning 262
Teaching strategies 271
Conclusion 295
Further resources 296
References 296

PART 3: WORKING IN EDUCATION CONTEXTS 301

11 How do I create and maintain safe and supportive learning environments? 302

Bernard Brown and Michaela Vergano

Introduction 303
Inclusion: policy, legislation and curriculum 304
CONTENTS

Creating and maintaining student participation 307
Creating and maintaining safe and supportive environments 314
Diversity 323
Conclusion 325
Further resources 327
References 327

12 How do I work with colleagues, parents/carers and the community? 331
Lisa McKay-Brown
Introduction 332
Building positive relationships 333
Working with others 342
Conclusion 353
Further resources 355
References 355

PART 4: DEVELOPING PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE 359

13 How do I make the most of professional experience? 360
Sue Hudson and Peter Hudson
Introduction 362
Preparing for professional experience 364
Desirable attributes for pre-service teachers 370
Engaging in professional experience 371
Concluding your professional experience 382
Conclusion 386
Further resources 387
References 387

14 When do I stop learning? 389
Rachel Buchanan and Scott Imig
Introduction 391
Teaching: a changing profession 391
Formal and informal pathways for teacher professional learning 396
Lifelong learning and career development 402
Learning for self-care and wellbeing 405
Conclusion 411
Further resources 411
References 411

Index 413
Welcome to teaching and the world of education. It is no exaggeration to say that you are entering this profession at a tumultuous time in world history. The role of teachers in the community has grown increasingly visible as whole structures of schooling have been changed almost overnight. We have seen the value of teachers as they transition from face-to-face to online teaching modes – supporting families, students and colleagues in the process. Teachers have shown that the attributes of being adaptable, problem solvers and engaging in collaboration with a variety of education stakeholders are key to being successful. Teaching for the affective and cognitive needs of students – from early childhood to schooling, and beyond to tertiary education – has arguably never been so obviously vital. With the unpredictable future currently being faced, the words attributed to former US President F.D. Roosevelt are apt: ‘We cannot always build the future for our youth, but we can build our youth for the future.’ What experienced teachers understand is that teaching is more than a transmission of knowledge and a professional practice. Teaching is the unifying connection of young people, community and the economy. It has become clear that the role of the teacher cannot be determined by policy or standardised measures, nor by romanticised views about what it is to be a teacher. Teaching and the role of the teacher are complex and require careful navigation of teachers’ perspectives, community expectations and policy directions. A line from the poem ‘The Heart of the Teacher’, by P.J. Fox, exemplifies this: ‘A teacher with a heart for her children knows what teaching is all about she may not have all the answers but on this she has no doubt.’

This book aims to equip you with knowledge, ideas and information to develop skills that will assist you while you are a pre-service teacher and into your first years in the classroom. With content and activities directly connected to the Australian Professional Standards for Teachers, the Alice Springs (Mparntwe) Education Declaration, state and territory policies, legislation, curriculum and the latest education research, you can be assured that this textbook will support you as you learn about education as a career and teach in secondary school, primary school and early childhood contexts. It will support you to develop flexible approaches to teaching and to your career more generally – to be able to respond to unplanned situations and opportunities. With activities integrated throughout the book, definitions of key terms, audio and audio-visual support materials, clear learning objectives that are aligned to industry standards, ‘pause and think’ opportunities to reflect on and consolidate your learning, extracts of key educational research and documents, and end-of-chapter activities, this textbook takes an innovative approach to presenting information to you, as you develop a deeper understanding of the role of teachers and the foundations of education.

Highlighting the multifaceted role of being a teacher as an exciting career with many possibilities, this quote by Professor John Fischetti (2014, p. 318) suits the current education context: ‘We must prepare young people to work together to create knowledge or solve problems to improve the human condition. A reframed curriculum can enable human capacity for the collaborative, global innovation age that demands care, compassion, love, and inspiration.’

–Heather Sharp, May 2020
Heather Sharp is an Associate Professor at the University of Newcastle. With a background as a high school History and English teacher, she has taught in education foundations since commencing her tertiary career in 2006. Heather is a founding member of the HERMES research group. She has been an invited researcher at the Georg Eckert Institute, Germany, and Linnaeus University, Sweden. Heather has taught and coordinated education courses in the areas of education foundations, History curriculum and pedagogies, literacies, education as a professional career, assessment and professional experience, and leads international study tours.

Sue Hudson is the Deputy Dean, Professional Experience across the three campuses of Southern Cross University. Sue has held various leadership roles in the tertiary sector during her career. Sue co-developed and led a large Australian Government grant titled ‘Teacher Education Done Differently’ (TEDD). The TEDD project team was recognised with an Australian Award for University Teaching (AAUT) citation and an award for Programs that Enhance Student Learning. Sue is the co-developer of the Mentoring for Effective Teaching (MET) program that develops the skills and practices of mentor teachers who support pre-service and beginning teachers.

Noelene Weatherby-Fell is the Head of Students (Education) at the University of Wollongong, New South Wales, providing leadership in supporting students in their academic progress and wellbeing, and in curriculum and pedagogy. She has presented and written about her work nationally and internationally with the Response Ability Project (HIMH), was a project team member on the Office for Learning and Teaching project BRiTE (Building Resilience in Teacher Education), and continues to work with colleagues across the higher education sector with the Staying BRiTE project. Noelene represents schools and universities on state and national bodies that govern the standards for teacher education courses and their accreditation.

Jennifer Charteris is Head of Department Learners, Learning and Teaching in the School of Education at the University of New England. As a teacher educator with teaching experience in Aotearoa/New Zealand, Australia and the United Kingdom, Jennifer has worked with principals, teachers, students and school communities across the primary, secondary and tertiary sectors. Jennifer has provided professional learning for principals and teachers in strengthening school leadership and developing processes around effective assessment and culturally responsive pedagogies. Her research interests span pedagogy in innovative learning environments, practitioner inquiry, student voice, assessment for learning and teacher professional learning.

Bernard Brown is Deputy Program Director of Secondary Education at the University of Canberra, where he teaches a range of units at the undergraduate and postgraduate levels focused on curriculum, education policy and leadership, and in the Masters Program in Hangzhou, China. He has worked in schools and universities both in Australia and abroad, and is a member of a number of educational committees.
ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Jason Lodge is Associate Professor of Educational Psychology in the School of Education and Institute for Teaching and Learning Innovation at the University of Queensland. He is also Honorary Principal Fellow in the Melbourne Graduate School of Education, University of Melbourne. Jason conducts research on the translation of the science of learning into practice in educational settings, particularly in digital learning environments and higher education.

Lisa McKay-Brown is a senior lecturer in Learning Intervention at the Melbourne Graduate School of Education at the University of Melbourne. She has worked in primary, secondary and special education settings, and specialist alcohol and other drug services. Lisa has been involved with a range of research projects in the fields of health and education. Internationally, she is researching the implementation of inclusive education in Ecuador and Peru.

Tracey Sempowicz is a lecturer at the University of the Sunshine Coast in the fields of child and adolescent development and learning, and inclusive education. She works with pre-service teachers who are completing their primary or secondary education programs. Previously, she was a secondary school teacher and Head of Department in five metropolitan and rural schools over a 25-year period. She strives to raise awareness about trauma-informed and inclusive practices in schools.

Rachel Buchanan is the Deputy Head of School (Postgraduate Teaching and Learning) and a Senior Lecturer in the School of Education at the University of Newcastle. She lectures in educational foundations and educational leadership, and has published in the areas of educational philosophy, pedagogy, and education policy and politics. Her research centres on social justice and equity in education, leading to her work in projects on academic literacy, widening participation, educational policy and equity issues associated with the increased use of digital technologies. Her research project uses post-digital theory to explore the emerging frontiers of educational technologies.

Scott Imig is an Associate Professor in the School of Education at the University of Newcastle, where he is also Deputy Head for Research and Convenor for the Graduate Leadership and Management Program. Scott works extensively with schools in New South Wales, where he conducts professional development in the areas of coaching, leadership, effective teaching and school transformation. In all of his work, Scott is primarily concerned with improving the quality of education for all children and creating environments in which educators and students thrive.

Peter Hudson is an Adjunct Associate Professor in the School of Education at Southern Cross University, and has a teaching career spanning 38 years, including 10 years as a primary school principal, and lecturing in universities (Southern Cross University, Queensland University of Technology). Peter was instrumental in devising and implementing international education courses for QUT (e.g. a Bachelor of Education degree in Malaysia). His Mentoring for Effective Teaching (MET) model is at the forefront of his work in education, with over 3000 trained MET facilitators linked to various schools, universities and institutes. Peter also led the development and implementation of the Mentoring Beginning Teachers (MBT) program in Queensland.
Michaela Vergano is a lecturer in the Faculty of Education at the University of Canberra. She is an Education Doctoral student, researching pedagogical content knowledge and teacher practice in personalised planning. Prior to entering academia, Michaela worked for over 25 years in Catholic, independent and tertiary institutions, predominantly in the secondary sphere in both New South Wales and the Australian Capital Territory. Michaela was previously Inclusive Education Coordinator at a secondary college, and a Learning Support Curriculum Officer for Catholic Education – Archdiocese of Canberra and Goulburn.

Michael Walsh is a lecturer at the University of Canberra. Prior to lecturing, he worked in numerous schools, both locally and internationally, as a teacher, mentor and Head of Department. Michael is currently involved in the Philosophy for Children movement and is a level 2 philosopher/educator. He is currently undertaking a doctorate on critical thinking in schools.
As authors of this textbook, we would like to acknowledge the support we received from Cambridge University Press as we worked on this book. Special thanks go to Senior Commissioning Editor, Michael Spurr, who has provided guidance, advice and care throughout the writing and editing process. Warm thanks are also due to Rose Albistion, Academic Development Editor, for her support, organisation and editing of our writing.

The author team recognise the role many have played in shaping our professional practice, developing our understanding of and expertise in teaching and learning, and developing strong education partnerships and communities. Some of these groups include: our pre-service teachers, whose interest and commitment in joining our profession is admirable and oftentimes inspiring with connections made that extend beyond graduation; in-service teachers, including those who provide supervision and mentoring for pre-service teachers and those who participate in other research and professional development experiences; our colleagues within and across our institutions who support us in our endeavours to provide research-based teaching and learning to pre-service teachers; and to those within education communities who have made and continue to make an impact on our thinking and our intentions in ensuring we support teachers to be the best they can be and to achieve to their potential.

Heather Sharp would like to personally thank Michael Spurr and Rose Albistion for the support they provided throughout the drafting, writing and editing process. Teaching is a profession that encourages communities of practice to flourish and, as such, she would like to thank her fellow first-year convenor, Rachel Birch, for the encouragement provided by her over the past few years, especially in sustaining the joy of teaching and working with students. Thank you to Melanie Innes who read a draft of Heather’s work and provided helpful feedback. She would also like to thank her students who have participated in classes, been dedicated to their studies, and helped refine, through their participation, many of the activities presented in her chapters.

Sue Hudson would like to acknowledge staff in the School of Education at Southern Cross University, in particular, Cathy Lembke, Amanda Isaac, Janice Hollister, Annie Baxter and the Professional Experience Team. As with any project, she has drawn upon experiences, conversations and work developed in collaborations with colleagues and teachers in the field. She would also like to acknowledge the mentor teachers, pre-service teachers and beginning teachers who afforded the time to discuss the chapters written and presented in this book. She feels she has benefitted greatly from their collective wisdom and experience.

Noelene Weatherby-Fell would like to particularly thank graduate teachers from the Graduate Diploma of Education and Master of Teaching programs at the University of Wollongong (Shoalhaven Campus), who shared their stories to inform the 'Voice box' resources in Chapter 2.

Jason Lodge would like to thank Tania and Buster.

Lisa McKay-Brown would like to thank Wendy Scott for her advice and expertise in the writing of case studies included in her chapter.

Tracey Sempowicz would like to thank her first-year university students, Caitlin Giret, Megan Hurst and Allison Roessel; teachers Lisa Claessen, Joanne Bell, Veronica McMahon and support staff at St Columban’s College for their contributions to knowledge, understanding and teaching strategies that support diverse learners.
Rachel Buchanan would like to thank Steven Newman for his view from the ‘chalkface’; Miriam, Isaac and Liam for their helpful input and patience; and all her students. The Initial Teacher Education students for their drive and enthusiasm for learning and the Masters of Educational Leadership students for their professional reflections on the reality of educational leadership in the twenty-first century.

Finally, the authors and Cambridge University Press would like to thank the staff and students at Preston High School, Clifton Hill Primary School and The Mac. Robertson Girls’ High School for their enthusiastic participation in photoshoots for this book.

We are grateful to the following individuals and organisations for permission to use their material in Introduction to Education.

Page 3 (bottom), Figure 1.1: Used with permission of Geoff Jones; Page 5: © Getty Images/Tom Werner; 66 (top): Licensed through Cartoonstock, created by Kate Curtis; 66 (bottom): Reproduced with permission of Patrick Corrigan; Figures 3.1, 6.2, 6.3, 6.4, 6.5: © Australian Curriculum, Assessment and Reporting Authority (ACARA) 2011 to present, unless otherwise indicated. This material was downloaded from the National Assessment Program website (www.nap.edu.au) (Website) and was not modified. The material is licensed under CC BY 4.0 (https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/). ACARA does not endorse any product that uses ACARA material or make any representations as to the quality of such products. Any product that uses ACARA’s material should not be taken to be affiliated with ACARA or have the sponsorship or approval of ACARA. It is up to each person to make their own assessment of the product; Table 3.1: © Commonwealth of Australia 2019, reproduced under a Creative Commons BY Attribution 3.0 Australia licence, (https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/3.0/au/); Tables 3.2, 4.1, 12.2: © Commonwealth of Australia. Reproduced under CC BY 4.0 license, (https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/); Figure 4.1: Reproduced with permission of Dr Tyson Yunkaporta; Figure 4.5: © Australian Institute of Health and Welfare 2019. Reproduced under CC BY 4.0 licence, (https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/); Table 7.1: Originally published by Routledge, reproduced under STM guidelines; Figures 10.15, 10.16: Pixabay; Figure 10.17: Originally published by Routledge, reproduced under STM guidelines; Figure 11.2: © State of Queensland, (Department of Education), reproduced under CC BY 4.0 license (https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/); Figure 12.2: Republished with permission of Wiley, from J.W. Neal & Z.P. Neal (2013). Nested or networked? Future directions for ecological systems theory. Social Development, 22(4), 722–37; permission conveyed through Copyright Clearance Center, Inc; Figure 12.3: Originally published by Taylor and Francis, reproduced under STM guidelines; Page 343: © Getty Images/JulianneBirch; Page 389: © Getty Images/Jeannette Rische/EyeEm; Page 390 (top): Reproduced with the permission of Cathy Wilcox; Page 390 (bottom): © 2020 the Australian Institute for Teaching and School Leadership (AITSL). The Content was created by AITSL. AITSL was formed to provide national leadership for the Commonwealth, State and Territory Governments in promoting excellence in the profession of teaching and school leadership with funding provided by the Australian Government. Figure 14.1, Tables 1.1, 12.1, 14.1. Extracts from Australian Charter for the Professional Learning of Teachers and School Leaders: © 2011 Education Services Australia Limited as the legal entity for the COAG Education Council (Education Council). Cambridge University Press has reproduced extracts of the Australian Professional Standards for Teachers in this publication with permission from the copyright
Every effort has been made to trace and acknowledge copyright. The publisher apologises for any accidental infringement and welcomes information that would rectify the situation.
Once you have redeemed your VitalSource access code (see the inside front cover for instructions), the enhanced eBook will appear in your VitalSource library, accessible through the VitalSource Bookshelf website or the VitalSource Bookshelf app, available on all major platforms. The instructions below provide a general overview of the main features in the enhanced eBook. Note that all solution pop-ups can be moved about the page.

This icon is used throughout the textbook to indicate the presence of an interactive component in the eBook. The accompanying descriptor indicates the type of content available.

Navigation and search

Move between pages and sections in multiple ways, including via the linked table of contents and the search tool.

Highlight

Highlight text with one click in your choice of colours. Add notes to highlighted passages.

Read aloud

VitalSource Bookshelf includes a read aloud feature. Controls can be used to increase or decrease the reading speed, or alter the voice. The feature will remember where you left off and will not be disrupted by navigation to other sections of the book.

Key terms

Click on bolded terms to display pop-up definitions of key concepts.
Bringing it together

Respond to the end-of-chapter questions and use the guided solutions to assess your response.

Links, videos and web activities

Explore relevant web and video content to extend your knowledge on the topics presented in the book.

Questions

After working through sections of text, respond to the short-answer and review questions (including those in Connections, Voice and Extract boxes). These are designed to quickly and easily test your understanding of the content and extend your thinking as you work your way through the book. Use the guided solutions to assess the key points covered in your response.

Audio

Some Voice boxes are accompanied by audio that will allow you to listen to the thoughts of pre-service teachers.

Downloads

Additional resources are available to download, including templates, checklists and worksheets.