

THE RECEPTION OF GREEK ETHICS IN LATE ANTIQUITY AND BYZANTIUM

Authored by an interdisciplinary team of experts, including historians, classicists, Byzantinists, philosophers and theologians, this original collection of essays offers the first authoritative analysis of the multifaceted reception of Greek ethics in late antiquity and Byzantium (ca. third–fourteenth centuries), opening up a hitherto under-explored topic in the history of Greek philosophy. The essays discuss the sophisticated ways in which moral themes and controversies from antiquity were reinvigorated and transformed by later authors to align with their philosophical and religious outlook in each period. Topics examined range from ethics and politics in Neoplatonism and ethos in the context of rhetorical theory and performance to textual exegesis on Aristotelian ethics. The volume will appeal to scholars and students in philosophy, classics, patristic theology, Byzantine studies and those working on the history of education and the development of Greek ethics.

SOPHIA XENOPHONTOS is Lecturer in Classics at the University of Glasgow. She is author of Ethical Education in Plutarch: Moralising Agents and Contexts (2016) and Medicine and Practical Ethics in Galen (forthcoming), and editor of George Pachymeres' Commentary on Aristotle's Nicomachean Ethics (forthcoming). She has published several articles and book chapters on practical ethics, the therapy of the emotions and the reception of the Greek ethical tradition in late Byzantium.

ANNA MARMODORO is Professor of Philosophy at Durham University and an associate faculty member of the Faculty of Philosophy at the University of Oxford. Her research interests span metaphysics, ancient, late antiquity and medieval philosophy, philosophy of science and philosophy of religion. She has written and edited numerous books and essay collections, including Metaphysics: An Introduction to Contemporary Debates and their History (co-authored with Erasmus Mayr, 2019) and Forms and Structure in Plato's Metaphysics (2021).

Acknowledgements

This book arose from an international conference on the reception of Greek ethics, which took place at Corpus Christi, Oxford, on 14 November 2018. The event was part of the research project ‘The reception of Aristotle in Byzantium: the first critical edition of George Pachymeres’ Commentary on Aristotle’s Nicomachean Ethics’ (AH/P008887/1, Principal Investigator: Sophia Xenophontos, Co-Investigator: Anna Marmodoro), funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council (AHRC). The editors would like to express their gratitude to the Trust for its substantial support, and also to thank the Classics department in the University of Glasgow and the British Society for the History of Philosophy for their financial assistance as well as Corpus Christi College for hosting the event. Only half of the chapters included in this volume were delivered as papers; the rest of them were commissioned at a later stage by world-leading experts in topics which we did not have the chance to cover in the context of the one-day conference. Thus rather than seeking to be exhaustive, our aim in this volume has been to offer an authoritative introduction to the multiple facets of this under-researched subject. Special thanks are owed to the Cambridge University Press anonymous readers for their insightful suggestions on an earlier version of this manuscript, and especially to Hilary Gaskin, the Cambridge University Press philosophy editor, for her expert care in shepherding this book to publication.
