

THE MYTHOLOGICAL ORIGINS OF RENAISSANCE FLORENCE

In this book, Irina Chernetsky examines how humanists, patrons, and artists promoted Florence as the reincarnation of the great cities of pagan and Christian antiquity – Athens, Rome, and Jerusalem. The architectural image of an ideal Florence was reflected in chronicles and histories, poetry and prose, and treatises on art and religious sermons. It was also portrayed in paintings, sculpture, and sketches, as well as being encoded in buildings erected during the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. Over time, the concept of an ideal Florence became inseparable from the real city, in both its social and architectural structures. Chernetsky demonstrates how the Renaissance notion of genealogy was applied to Florence, which was considered to be part of a family of illustrious cities of the past and of the present. She also explores the concept of the ideal city in its intellectual, political, and aesthetic contexts, while offering new insights into the experience of urban space.

Irina Chernetsky is a scholar of Renaissance art and a participant in the Projections of Jerusalem in Europe research group. Her scholarship has been supported by the European Research Council, the Israel Science Foundation, and the German-Israeli Foundation for Scientific Research.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This work traces the path of a long journey through the historic times and imagined spaces of Florence in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. My muses and guides in this adventure were the leading figures in the Florentine arena of the time, their personal ambitions and social aspirations, their talent and thirst for knowledge, all of which converged in an unprecedented cultural blossoming.

I can never sufficiently express my thanks to my mentor, Prof. Luba Freedman, who introduced me, beginning in my undergraduate years, to the richness of Italian Renaissance culture, and has continued to inspire me to explore its complexity. The most intriguing ideas expressed in this book flourished as the result of our conversations. Her careful and critical readings of the manuscript at its various stages, together with her sustained intellectual support, so generously given, have made an inestimable contribution to the successful completion of this study.

My warmest thanks are extended to Dr. Barbara De Marco, Editor of Romance Philology, for her sustained interest and editorial assistance.

I am grateful to Prof. Paul Barolsky, who encouraged me to turn my dissertation into a book. I would also like to express my gratitude to Prof. Bianca Kühnel for the invitation to participate, for several years, in the research group, Spectrum: Visual Translations of Jerusalem at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. The research that formed the basis of this book was supported by the European Research Council (ERC), the Israel Science Foundation (ISF), Abraham and Rachel Bornstein Endowment Fund for the Department of History of Art in The Hebrew University of Jerusalem, and the Beit Berl College.

My sincere thanks also to Dr. Beatrice Rehl, Senior Editor at the Cambridge University Press, for her interest in this project. I am grateful to the Press for their serious consideration of my manuscript, as well as to the anonymous readers who read earlier drafts; their comments were invaluable. Thank you to the production team, especially to the copy-editor Kilmeny MacBride.

The final details required to bring this project to completion were complicated by the conditions imposed by the pandemic. The closure of libraries and other agencies, especially in Italy, and the extensive delays in securing permissions for reproductions were among the obstacles that could not have been overcome without the generous assistance of friends and colleagues, especially Dr. Shai Biderman, Dr. Hava Contini, Pazit Entin, Anna Frischknecht-Agapova, Gianna Innocenti, Olga Litwak, Prof. Galit Noga-Banai, Anna Rubinstein, and the best librarians, Marina Shneiderman and Gila Emanuel, to whom I extend my heartfelt thanks. I am particularly grateful to Dr. Sveta Matskevich for her help with photographs.

The many years that I spent researching and writing this study mark a period of time which for me was supremely interesting, creative, and productive, and for my family, often terribly demanding. They withstood many challenges for my sake, and without their help and support I could never have completed this work. To them I am eternally grateful. My grandmother, Dr. Sophia Sheines, selflessly devoted herself to my cause, as did my wonderful parents, Alla and Leonid Chernetsky. Throughout every phase of my studies, my husband, Evgeny Lazarev, was a partner to the creative process, and our two sons, Ilan and Eithan, one of whom was born during this period, inspired me to see this formidable project through to completion.
