

MONEY MATTERS IN MIGRATION

Migration, participation, and citizenship, are central political and social concerns, are deeply affected by money. The role of money – tangible, intangible, conceptual, and as a policy tool – is understudied, overlooked, and analytically underdeveloped. For sending and receiving societies, migrants, their families, employers, NGOs, or private institutions, money defines the border, inclusion or exclusion, opportunity structures, and equality or the lack thereof. Through the analytical lens of money, the chapters in this book expose hidden and sometimes contradictory policy objectives, unwanted consequences, and inconsistent regulatory structures. The authors from a range of fields provide multiple perspectives on how money shapes decisions from all actors in migration trajectories, from micro to macro level. Taking an interdisciplinary approach, the book draws on case studies from Europe, the Americas, Asia, and Africa. This comprehensive overview brings to light the deep global impacts money has on migration and citizenship.

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

ANITA BÖCKER is Associate Professor of Sociology of Law at the Law Faculty of Radboud University, Nijmegen, the Netherlands. She has published widely on the social and legal status of immigrants, the effectiveness of anti-discrimination law, and the regulation of migration and immigrant integration in the Netherlands and other European states. Her recent research focuses on migration and return migration in later life and on live-in migrant care arrangements in Germany and the Netherlands.

MARÍA BRUQUETAS-CALLEJO is Research Fellow at the Center for Migration Law, Radboud University, Nijmegen, the Netherlands. Her work deals with migration and welfare state policies from a comparative, multidisciplinary, and multilevel perspective. She has published widely on immigrants' access to healthcare and to the welfare state, immigrant integration policies, and transnational eldercare arrangements. Her recent research examines the migration-welfare state nexus, emphasizing the contribution of migrants to retrenching welfare states in the field of long-term care.

BETTY DE HART is Professor of Transnational Families and Migration Law at Vrije University, Amsterdam Centre for Migration and Refugee Law (ACMRL). Her legal, empirical, and historical research focuses on gender and migration, citizenship, mixed (status) families, and law in everyday life. She is the recipient of an ERC Consolidator Grant for her research project EUROMIX: Regulating Mixed Intimacies in Europe, addressing the question of whether, how, and why 'mixed' relationships are regulated in Europe.

JUDITH DE JONG is a PhD candidate in political science at the University of Amsterdam. Her interdisciplinary research focuses on how intersections of ethnicity/race and gender affect citizens' assessments of their political representation, comparing France, Germany, and the Netherlands. She is interested in postcolonial studies, intersectionality, and people's everyday encounters with and understandings of politics and law.

TESSELTJE DE LANGE is Professor of European Migration Law, Director of the Centre of Migration Law (CMR) at the Faculty of Law, and a member of the Radboud University Network of Migrant Inclusion (RUNOMI), all at the Radboud University, Nijmegen, the Netherlands. She has worked as an immigration lawyer, honorary-district judge in immigration cases, and, until 2020, vice-chair of the Dutch Advisory Committee of Migration Affairs, advising the Dutch government. Her research interests are labour migration law and governance in Europe as well as globally, and migrant worker rights.

CRISTIANO D'ORSI is currently a senior research fellow and lecturer at the South African Research Chair in International Law (SARCIL)/University of Johannesburg. His research interests mainly focus on the legal protection of asylum seekers, refugees, migrants, and IDPs in Africa, on African human rights law, and, more broadly, on the development of public international law in Africa and in the so-called developing countries all around the world.

PEDRO DE SENA is a legal adviser with extensive experience in legislative affairs. He is a PhD candidate at the University of Amsterdam, researching norm creation processes in the context of labour migration. He has a particular interest in migration in Asia, where he lived for over two decades. Currently he is a senior adviser to the State Secretary for Home Affairs in the Portuguese Government.

HELGA EGGEBO is a senior researcher at the Nordland Research Institute in Bodø, Norway. She holds a PhD in sociology from the University of Bergen (2013), and her thesis explored the regulation of marriage migration to Norway. Her recent work on migration focuses on family migration, integration, immigration regulations after the refugee crises in 2015, and living conditions among queer migrants. Eggebø's recent projects also include research on ageing, gender equality, and climate change.

LORENA GAZZOTTI is the Alice Tong Sze research fellow at Lucy Cavendish College and CRASSH, University of Cambridge. Her research explores the expansion of security and racialized regimes of containment at the Euro-African border. Her research has been published in the Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies, the American Behavioral Scientist, the Journal of North African Studies, and the Sociological Review. Her first book, Immigration Nation: Aid, Control, and Border Politics in Morocco, is forthcoming with Cambridge University Press.

ELSPETH GUILD is Jean Monnet Professor ad personam, Emeritus Professor of Law at Radboud University, Nijmegen, the Netherlands, and Professor of Law at Queen Mary University of London. She is also a partner at the London law firm Kingsley Napley and a visiting professor at the College of Europe, Bruges. Her interests and expertise lie primarily in the area of EU law, in particular EU Justice and Home Affairs (including immigration, asylum, border controls, criminal law, and police and judicial cooperation in criminal matters). She also researches EU privacy and data protection law and the nexus with human rights. She is also co-editor of the European Journal of Migration and Law. She is co-editor of the book series Immigration and Asylum Law and Policy in Europe published by Martinus Nijhoff.

VINCENT HORN is a postdoctoral researcher at the Institute of Education, Johannes Gutenberg University Mainz, Germany. His expertise includes transnational ageing, transnational migration in old age, old age and transnational families, old-age care migration, and migrant care migration as well as older refugees. He was involved in the research project 'Emergence and Significance of Transnational Old Age Care Arrangements in Germany and the Netherlands', financed by the German Research Foundation (DFG). He is currently conducting a study on older refugees in Germany.

CHARLES LARRATT-SMITH is currently a visiting research fellow at the Observatorio de Dinámicas del Conflicto Armado en el Caribe (Universidad del Norte). His research focuses on counterinsurgency, armed non-state actors, organized crime, and forced displacement and migration, with a regional focus on Latin America.

ELAINE LEBON-MCGREGOR is a postdoctoral researcher at United Nations University-MERIT and the Maastricht Graduate School of Governance, Maastricht University. Her main research interest lies in the area of global migration governance with a particular focus on international organizations and policy coherence. Her doctoral research focused on the role of international organizations in the evolution of global migration governance. She is currently working on the MIGNEX project (www.mignex.org/).

WILLEM MAAS is Professor of Political Science, Public & International Affairs, and Socio-Legal Studies at York University, where he holds a Jean Monnet Chair. He writes on EU and multilevel citizenship, migration, borders, free movement, and politics focusing on Europe and North America.

SANDRA MANTU is Assistant Professor at the Centre for Migration Law (CMR), Faculty of Law, Radboud University, Nijmegen, the Netherlands and co-managing editor of the European Journal of Migration and Law. Her research focuses on EU citizenship, free movement of persons, implementation of EU law, social rights, equality and access to the welfare state, and nationality law.

NICHOLAS R. MICINSKI is Libra Assistant Professor of Political Science and International Affairs at the University of Maine. His research interests include immigration and refugee policy, global governance, development, and human rights. He is the author of two books: Delegating Responsibility: International Cooperation on Migration in the European Union (University of Michigan Press, 2022) and UN Global Compacts: Governing Migrants and Refugees (Routledge, 2021).

CATERINA MOLINARI is a PhD candidate at the Institute for European Law of the KU Leuven since September 2017 and an FWO doctoral fellow since October 2018. Her research focuses on the EU's external action in the area of migration. More particularly, she has worked on the constitutionality of the EU's return and readmission policy, on its fundamental rights implications, as well as on the progressive informalization and externalization of EU migration management.

KIMBERLY J. MORGAN is Professor of Political Science at George Washington University. Her work examines the politics shaping public policies, with particular interests in migration and social welfare. She is the author of Working Mothers and the Welfare State: Religion and the Politics of Work-Family Policy in Western Europe and the United States (Stanford 2006) and The Delegated Welfare State: Medicare, Markets, and the Governance of American Social Policy (Oxford 2011), and co-editor of several volumes, including The Many Hands of the State: Theorizing Political Authority and Social Control (Cambridge 2017).

ELENA PRATS is a qualified lawyer and a PhD candidate in philosophy of law at both Uppsala University and Pompeu Fabra University. Her research interests lie in the fields of legal theory, migration, and citizenship policies. Prats' dissertation provides an approach to the assessment of the legitimacy of programmes granting citizenship for investments in the EU from the perspective of legal philosophy.

ANNETTE SCHRAUWEN is Professor of European Integration at the Centre for European Law and Governance (ACELG) at the University of Amsterdam. She is one of the theme leaders of the research theme 'Diverse Europe' of the Amsterdam Centre of European Studies (ACES), an interdisciplinary Centre of Excellence for research, education, and public debate about Europe, the European Union, and its member states. Annette is chair of the editorial board of Legal Issues of Economic Integration. She has published widely in the field of EU free movement law and EU citizenship.

CORNELIA SCHWEPPE is Professor of Social Pedagogy at the Johannes Gutenberg University Mainz, Germany. She was the director of the doctoral research programme 'Transnational Social Support' financed by the German Research Foundation and was awarded a fellowship at the Gutenberg Research College. She has published widely on transnational ageing, retirement migration, and old-age care. Her current research includes projects on retirement migration to Kenya and Thailand, care migration to Poland and Thailand, and transnational care arrangements in Germany and the Netherlands.

AYELET SHACHAR is Professor of Law, Political Science, and Global Affairs at the University of Toronto, and Director of the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Religious and Ethnic Diversity. Her research spans the fields of citizenship theory, immigration law, new border regimes, elite migration and global inequality, combining insights from law and political theory with innovative institutional design. Shachar is a fellow of the Royal Society of Canada and the recipient of numerous excellence awards, most recently the Leibniz Prize – Germany's most prestigious research award.
