Contents

Acknowledgements  page x
List of Plates  xiii
List of Abbreviations and Archival Sources  xiv
Table of Cases  xvii
Table of Statutes  xix

1 Introduction  1

2 Art, Copyright and ‘Authors’, Part 1: 1850–62  12
   Art and the Taxonomy of Authorship  15
      Painters, Engravers and Struggles for Artistic Status  15
      Photography’s ‘Allegory’ of Mental and Mechanical Labour  17
      Artistic Copyright and the Taxonomy of Authorship  20
      The Artistic Copyright Debates of the Late 1850s  22
      The Copyright Proposals of the Royal Scottish Academy, Royal Academy of Arts and Society of Painters in Water Colours  22
      The Society of Arts’ Copyright Committee Chaired by Sir Charles Eastlake  23
      Photography, Copyright and Oscar Gustav Rejlander’s The Two Ways of Life  26
      The Society of Arts’ Proposals of 1858 and 1859: Copyright and the Department of Science and Art  29
      Artistic Copyright in the Legislative Sphere  32
      Attempts at the Introduction of Legislation in 1859 and 1860  32
      The Copyright Bill 1861: David Octavius Hill and Copyright as Evidence of Artistic Status  33
      Photography, Copyright and Portraiture  38
      The House of Commons’ Bill of 1862: Time, Labour and Money  39
      The House of Lords’ Debates of 1862: Photographs and Proof of Copying  42
      The House of Lords’ Select Committee 1862: Originality and Photographs  45
      Royal Assent: The Passage of the Fine Arts Copyright Act 1862  48

3 Art, Copyright and ‘Authors’, Part 2: 1862–1911  49
   Law and Art in Adjudication after 1862  53
   Painting and Engraving Copyright  53
Table of Contents

Photographic Copyright: Graves’ Case (1869) 55

Nottage v. Jackson (1883) 56

Nottage, Graves’ Case and the Disjunction between Law and Art 61

Melville v. Mirror of Life (1895) 64

Law and Art in Legislative Reform 1862–1911 67

Overview: The Royal Academy of Arts, Press Photography and Artistic Status 67

The 1880s: Basil Field and the Royal Academy of Arts 71

The Foundation of the Photographic Copyright Union in 1894 74

Photographers, Art and the Illustrated Press 77

Gambier Bolton v. Cecil Aldin (1895) 79

The 1899 Bill: The Royal Academy and Copyright as a Designation of Artistic Status 81

Photography, Copyright and ‘What is Art?’ in 1899 85

Copyright and Photography’s ‘Allegory of Labour’ in 1899 89

Photographic Copyright and Peter Henry Emerson’s ‘Renunciation’ 91

The Artistic Copyright Society’s Bill and Press Photography 94

Photographic Copyright and Picture Libraries in the 1900s 98

Court Enforcement against the Illustrated Press 100

The Gorell Committee and the Photographic Copyright Union 101

The Linked Ring and Copyright Debates in the Early Twentieth Century 103

Conclusion 105

4 Art, Copyright and Collectors: The Wrongs That Artists Commit, 1850–1911 107

Setting the Scene: Collectors, Painters and the Art Market 115

The Physical Canvas and the Engraving Acts 115

The Physical Canvas and Painting Copyright 117

Collectors, Copyright and the Making of the Fine Arts Copyright Act 1862 123

The Society of Arts’ Copyright Committee: Millais’ The Escape of the Heretic and Faed’s Home and Homelessness 123

The Society of Arts’ Draft Bills of 1858–1859 127

The Artistic Copyright Bill 1861 129

Collectors and Artistic Copyright in 1862 132

Copyright and Collectors’ Control: 1862–1900 136

The 1862 Act and the Lapse of Copyright on First Sale 136

The Society of Arts’ Bill 1869: Restrictions on ‘Repititions’ 139

The Royal Commission on Copyright and the 1878 Bill 142

The Painters Respond and the Debates of the 1880s: Restrictions on ‘Replicas’ 145

The Debates of the 1890s: The St John’s Wood Arts Club Committee Chaired by Alma-Tadema 150

The 1900 Bill: Lord Thring and ‘Dual Rights’ in Paintings 155

Copyright and Collectors 1900–1911: Recasting the Problem and Solution 156

The Gorell Committee on Copyright 1909 157

The Copyright Bills of 1910 and 1911: Use of Artists’ Sketches and Studies 159

Conclusion 161
Table of Contents

5 Art, Copyright and the Face: Copyright As a Nineteenth-Century Publicity Right

- Nineteenth-Century Copyright and the History of the Legal Protection of Identity
- Introducing the Celebrity Portrait Trade: Copyright and Trade Practice in the 1860s and 1870s
- Copyright Litigation and the Celebrity Portrait Trade in the 1860s: Lydia Thompson, Franz Müller and the Duke of Cambridge
- The Face and Photographic Copyright: 1880–1911
- Continuity: Photographic Copyright as Protection for the Face
- Change: Factors Complicating the Relation between Copyright and the Face
- Theatrical Photography and Copyright as a Publicity Right
- Conclusion

6 Art, Copyright and the Public Interest: Galleries, Print sellers and ‘Pirates’

- Artistic Copyright and Private Study
- Gallery Copying in Certain Colonies: Leighton’s Wedded and Fildes’ The Widower
- Artistic Works and Copyright at Common Law: Wallis’ The Death of Chatterton
- Infringement, the Courts and the Public Interest
- Literary Copyright’s ‘Humble Grey’
- Case Law: Infringement other than by Photography: Living Pictures and Barlow’s Engraving of Millais’ The Huguenot
- Legislative Debates and ‘Public Interest’ Exceptions
- Case Law: Infringement through Photography
- Graves, Gambart and Photographic Reproduction of Engravings of Paintings
- Photographic Reproduction and the Public Interest
- Litigation and the Engraving Acts: Bonheur’s The Horse Fair and Hunt’s The Light of the World
- Print sellers, ‘Pirates’ and the Fine Arts Copyright Act 1862
- Art Reproduction and Copyright in the 1890s and 1900s: Reynolds-Stephens v. Black and White (1896), Millais’ Bubbles and Frith’s The New Frock
- Conclusion

7 Drawing Conclusions: Images of Art and Images of Copyright

- Copyright History as a Critical Lens
- Legislative Policy
- Case Law
- Law and Context
- Law and the Cultural Domain

Bibliography

Index

The plate section can be found between pages 124 and 125